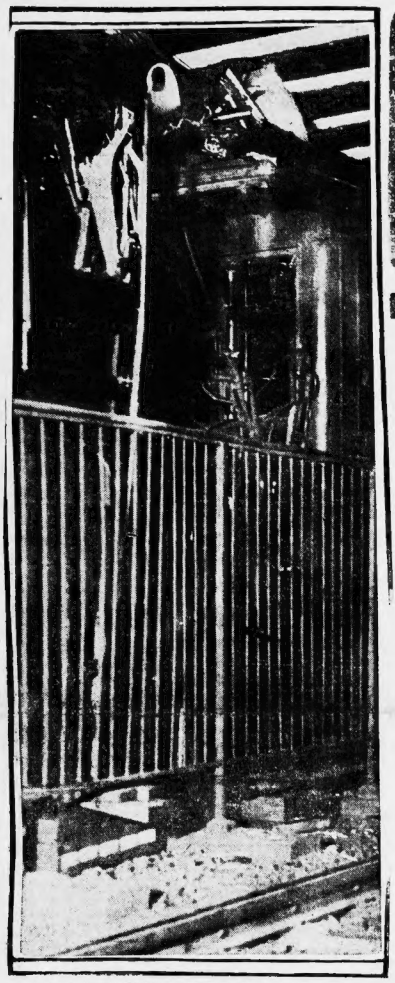
CROWDED 'L' TRAINS CRASH 500 IN PANIC



SNAPSHOT SHOWING A FORMER SUBWAY COLLISION.

HOW TWO CARS LOOK IN SUBWAY COLLISION TO-DAY.

This photograph of the results of the collision in the Subway was taken before the Elevated Railroad management forbade the photographing of rolling stock injured in accidents.

Officials of Road Declared They Were Empty, but Passengers Tell of Accident—Motorman Injured in Collision at Haymarket.

After issuing an untrue official statement with reference to the subway collision early to-day at the Haymarket square station, in which more than 500 passengers suffered from bruises, shock, fright and delay, the company attempted to conceal the fact that a motorman had been injured severely.

The railway officials refused to give the name of the motorman who was hurt. It was reported that he had been taken to the Relief Hospital for treatment, but it was denied there that they had any knowledge of such a patient.

Angry at Printed Facts.

General William A. Bancroft, president of the Boston Elevated railway, issued a permit for a photographer of the BOSTON AMERICAN to take pictures of the smashed cars at the Sullivan square yards. Then some one brought to his attention a copy of this newspaper in which the facts of the collision were told, and the General was so angry that he telephoned to Sullivan square revoking the permit.

The official statement given out about the accident declares that "two empty trains came together" and that "no one was injured." In interviews with passengers, trainmen and others who saw the crash these statements are shown to be false.

The escape of the motorman of the rear train from being crushed to death is explained by the fact that because of the curve in the tracks the cars did not come squarely together, the right-hand side of the vestibule where he was placed not suffering so severely as the left hand side.

HAND AND ARM HURT.

As it was the man was pinned in the little motor cage, one hand and arm being severely hurt, while he was otherwise injured.

When the passengers who crowded the cars, many of them women in a hysterical condition, emerged from the trains they were imperilled by the deadly third rail, past which they threaded their way to the North Station.

Many of the passengers were hurled from their seats by the impact of the trains. Showers of broken glass cut into the faces of men and women who were in the front car of the rear train and fell upon those who occupied the smoker or the rear car of the front train. So great was the force of the collision that the two cars were jammed together so that they looked like one car.

The accident was caused by the breaking down of the motive power of one train. A second train attempted to push the disabled one up the steep grade at the curve north of the Haymarket station.

TEN CARS SLIP BACKWARD.

The wet rails of the early morning caused the wheels to slip, and, in spite of the motorman's efforts on the second train, the ten cars began to slide backward toward the station.

A third train, numbering 975, was just pulling out of the station and had come out of the tunnel into the cut. The motorman saw the train backing toward him. He realized that a collision was inevitable, but began to back his train with all the power at his command. Then the crash came.

This is the story of A. C. Roberts, of Washington street, Brookline, who was a passenger in the third train:

"I came from my home on a surface car to the Boylston street station and there boarded the first car of the train for the North Station. Although there was no one standing that I remember the car was well filled. Nearly every seat was taken.

"At Haymarket square the train started up and came to a stop just inside the entrance to the Subway. Then it started up again and a moment later there was a terrific crash.

"Everybody in the car, I think, was knocked in some direction. As for myself I was hurled across the aisle and when I got on my feet again, everybody was making for the rear door.

"Everybody got into the second car and from the rear platform climbed down to the elevated structure, from which we made our way to the North Station platform, up the incline.

"I noticed that the rear vestibule of the last car on the train which backed on to ours and the vestibule of the car in which I was sitting were jammed together, locked in one embrace as it were. How people escaped from getting seriously hurt is a mystery to me, for the trains certainly came together with a good crash."

CRASH HEARD FOR BLOCKS.

F. W. French, who is in business at No. 16 Canal street, saw the crash. This is what he said:

"I was walking along Canal street, and I saw the two trains come together. The sound of their impact could be heard for blocks. They telescoped until the two cars that came together looked like one car. The vestibules were demolished.

"Immediately after the crash the doors were opened and the passengers began to pile off the cars. They were naturally excited, and the train men were afraid that some of them might step on the deadly third rail, and they kept crying 'Look out for the third rail—look out for the third rail!'

"After the passengers got out I saw the trainmen carrying out parts of doors and door frames. It was apparent that things had been smashed up pretty badly. Windows were broken and glass flew about in every direction. The cars seemed to be pretty well filled, as they had been on passengers at Park street and Scollay square."

While the road was being cleared the trains were run around to the North Station by the way of Atlantic avenue.

The Official Statement and the Truth of the Subway Crash

This is the official and untrue statement of the Subway accident as given out by the company, in which it is declared that the trains were empty and that no one was hurt:

"Two empty trains came together near the Haymarket square station of the Subway, northbound, at 6:40 a. m., blocking traffic until 8 o'clock, when normal traffic was resumed. No one was injured, although the ends of both trains were damaged."

Here is the truth from those who saw the collision:

F. W. French of No. 16 Canal street, said: "I saw the two trains come together. Immediately after the crash the doors were opened and the passengers began to pile off the cars."

E. C. Roberts of Brookline, a passenger on the front car of the rear train, said: "Everybody in the car, I think, was knocked in some direction. As for myself I was hurled across the aisle and when I got to my feet again everybody was making for the rear door."

Railway employes, who did not dare to give their names: "The motorman had one of his hands and arm severely hurt. He was taken to the Relief Hospital for treatment."

SHIP ON SHOAL, TO LOSE CARGO

Special to the Boston American.

CHATHAM, Aug. 7.—The three-masted schooner George B. Jordan of New York was crowded on to Pollock Rip shoals today by an unknown tug towing four barges, which failed in the fog to give the Jordan enough seaway. The Jordan is leaking badly and her cargo of coal will probably have to be thrown overboard to get her free. None of the men aboard were hurt.

The Jordan is owned by Pendleton Bros. of No. 130 Pearl street, New York, and was bound for Gardiner, Me. She was crowded on to the shoals at 4 a. m. to-day. She was sighted later by Captain Joseph Kelly of the Monomoy Point life saving station, who put out with a life crew. Capt. Kennebunport, Me., in 1874. The cargo of coal is valued at $3,000.

Captain Walter F. Mitchell of Harrington, Me., was taken ashore so he could notify the owners and ask for instructions. The crew stayed aboard the Jordan, which was resting easily on the shoals.

The Jordan registered 605 gross tons, was valued at $12,000 and was built at

To-day's Heat to Rival Yesterday's Record

1 DEAD, 6 OVERCOME

No Relief Promised by Weather Bureau Before To-morrow.

Again an exhausted humanity is endeavoring to work and walk about the streets, though suffering from the intense heat.

Despite the fact that the humidity was lessened by many degrees from that of yesterday, five persons were taken to the hospitals during the forenoon, and one man died while asleep on a roof endeavoring to obtain relief.

Thomas Conn, a homeless wanderer, stopped at No. 1,804 Washington street last night and asked if he might sleep on the roof. He was suffering greatly from the heat. Permission to occupy a fence was given him, and he climbed wearily to the roof.

Died of Heart Failure.

Early to-day the landlady, Mrs. Belle Cole, went to the roof and found Conn apparently lifeless. A physician gave the

300 OF THOUSAND ISLANDS TO BE SOLD

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 7.—George H. Cobb, as referee, will sell here Saturday 300 islands in the Thousand Island district of the St. Lawrence river, in pursuance of a judgment granted in the action of Jane S. Waterlett, as trustee, against Stephen S. Yates et al.

All parties in the action are heirs of the late Henry Yates, of Schenectady. All the islands were won by Mr. Yates in the lottery arranged early in the fifties for the benefit of the colleges of the State cause of death as heart failure, supervened by the heat.

At daylight other occupants of roofs wakened to find there was slight relief over yesterday, when there were thirty complete prostrations and one hundred and fifty partial prostrations treated at the city hospitals.

Coolest at 4 O'Clock.

It was coolest at 4 o'clock this morning. It was then 73. After that the figures commenced to ascend. By 10 o'clock it had crept up to 82 and was still going up.

The prospects are that there will be little relief during the day and the night will undoubtedly rival the suffering of last night. To-morrow showers are looked for with a possible cooling of the atmosphere.

The first man to drop from the heat was Charles Kafe of Revere, who toppled over in Haymarket square and was taken into the relief station. Harry Hamilton, 4227 from the heat, fell off a platform on Albany street and was taken to the City Hospital. Others followed in quick succession.

William Hackett, aged sixty-five years, discharged to-day from the City Hospital, endeavored to walk along Harrison avenue and fell. He was taken back to the institution. He was the sixth victim of the day.

SCORES ARE OVERCOME.

Scores of people yesterday went down under the heat and excessive humidity.

Prostrations by the score were reported. At the Relief Hospital alone 125 cases of all kinds were handled. People all but dropped along the streets and were treated by friends or street cures. These are not included in the numbers at the hospitals. Twenty-three of the prostrations were of the serious kind.

One death has thus far resulted, that of Fred Wells, sixty years old. He expired in a train at the Back Bay station early in the day, his system, weakened by a heart trouble, being unable to stand the heat. He lived in Mansfield.

Overcome, Fell, Broke Spine.

Another death may follow from an accident which befell John Cunneen, fifty-four years old, of No. 2 Rock street, who was overcome while working on a building in Roxbury and fell to the ground, breaking his spine. He is on the dangerous list at the City Hospital.

Other victims of Old Sol's vengeance are in bad condition to-day. At the Emergency Hospital in an unconscious condition is a young woman who fell to the pavement on Elliston street. Her name was not learned. When she was partially revived at the hospital all she could say was "Sophie." Then she lapsed into unconsciousness.

TWO MORE DIE IN NEW YORK TO-DAY FROM THE HEAT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—New York still writhed to-day under the burning heat of a pitiless sky. A gentle breeze was all that made the day a little more bearable than yesterday.

Nor had the official forecaster much to offer in the way of comfort for the unfortunates. Light thunder storms were said to be a possibility in the evening, but mean while the thermometer, which had risen at about the same point as yesterday, continued to mount higher and higher as the day advanced.

Two dead to-day:

Jos. Roberuehl, No. 437 West Forty seventh street, died in Bellevue Hospital.

Charles Van Arsdale, No. 220 West Eighteenth street.

The terrible list of prostrations of yesterday was augmented all through the night. The hospitals were crowded with those who had been overcome in the stifling atmosphere. Thousands slept on the beaches and in the down town parks, but even there the night brought no relief.

Over twenty died yesterday and hundreds were prostrated as a result of the heat.

FUNERAL OF MRS. LAWSON AT DREAMWOLD

The funeral of Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson, wife of the famous financier, will probably take place at her beloved summer home, Dreamwold, in Scituate, to-morrow. Flags in the town are all at half-mast and the people without exception sympathize deeply with the bereaved family. Gathered at Dreamwold are all the members of the Lawson family endeavoring to comfort Mr. Lawson in his grief.

The last of the family to arrive was Arnold Lawson, who came into Marion head in his yacht, Cygnet, yesterday, with his young bride. He did not make a fast automobile from a garage in Lynn and ordered the chauffeur, E. B. Rust:

"Get me to my mother as quick as possible without killing me. Speed the machine to the limit and never mind fines, for the cost is nothing to me so long as you get me there without loss of time."

The distance is about forty-five miles and the destination was reached in an hour and 45 minutes. Allowing for the slow speed in the towns the big machine must have covered ninety miles an hour on the country roads.

The funeral of Mrs. Lawson will be strictly private. The employes at Dreamwold will be allowed to view the face of the dead lady as she lay in state.

SAYS $100,000 WILLED TO HER, SUES TO GET IT

Miss Thayer Explains Her Claims Against Lawyer and Sister of Benefactor.

In her first statement to the public, Miss Mary Millicent Thayer of Melrose to-day gave to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN her reasons for bringing suits as greeting $100,000 against persons who she alleges, defrauded her out of the fortune bequeathed to her by Augustus Bodland, an old merchant.

The defendants in the suits are Mrs. Florence Kitchen, of this city, a daughter of the dead man, and her attorney, Edward R. Jones, of Brockton. Miss Thayer, who was formerly married, but who got a divorce and resumed her maiden name, asserts that Mr. Rolland willed her his fortune of $100,000 for attentions that she gave him. She says that she will be able to establish this. Here her story:

Mr. Rolland died on the 15th of May, last year. I was to have been married in the following September. The wedding had been postponed once owing to his ill health.

Saw Will in Desk.

"I called at his rooms at the Thorndike on May 12, three days before his death. He told me at that time that he had made a will in my favor and that the will was in his desk drawer. The nurse opened the drawer and showed me the will and I told him that I would take nothing but what rightfully belonged to me. The nurse put the will back and closed the drawer and desk.

"Mr. Rolland and his daughter, Mrs. Florence Kitchen, who lived in the Back Bay had had some little family squabbles and the father, a man of very strong mind, refused to see his daughter. On my knees I begged Mr. Rolland to see his daughter and Mr. Rolland said to me, 'I can refuse you nothing.'

"Then I hunted up his daughter and told her that her father was ill and that she should try to see him, which she did the same evening. She came to the Thorndike, accompanied by Lawyer Jones. He waited in the hotel lobby, while Mrs. Kitchen went up to the room. They came again on the 15th, and were there when he died at 6 o'clock in the evening. Immediately after Mr. Rolland died, Lawyer Jones went to Mr. Damon, manager of the hotel, and sold he must have the room as he was acting for the daughter.

"The proprietor permitted him to go to the room and took papers that were in the desk, including the will, and the next morning took the remaining letters. All I have now are a few letters which I wrote to Mr. Rolland.

Says She Has Witnesses.

"There was only one will, not two. I will prove that that will was in my name and that all the property was left to me."

Miss Thayer lives with his mother and sister at Melrose Highlands. She is tall and of dark complexion. When interviewed she was dressed completely in black. She has known Mr. Rolland for six years, and wears a family ring of the Rollands.

CONVICT CAPTURED BY ARMED SHERIFF

PLYMOUTH, Aug. 7.—For his sensational capture of a runaway from the Bridgewater Farm, High Sheriff Henry S. Porter is to-day receiving congratulations. William Vincent, the captured man, has a bad police record. He had nearly served out his sentence so was given the privileges of a trusty. He skipped and the sheriff pursued him on foot and in a buggy, finally taking him at the point of his pistol.

BLAMES DIRECTORS IN $1,000,000 BANK CRASH

BANK EXAMINER SAYS THEY SHOULD HAVE HAD MISSING PRESIDENT ARRESTED.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Paul G. Steinland, president of the broken Milwaukee Avenue State Bank, is supposed to be in Chicago to-day, and a warrant for his arrest will be the next development in the most pathetic bank failure in the history of Chicago.

The bank, it is asserted, was run by Steinland for his own profit, along the lines that John R. Walsh pursued in his wrecking methods. Large sums were used to promote Steinland's personal enterprises and the crash followed.

It is rumored that the shortage will amount to $1,000,000.

Steinland is accused of huge forgeries extending over more than five years and involving wild speculations.

Cashier H. W. Hering, for whose a warrant is out, is still missing.

Think He Was with Son.

President Steinland left Chicago three weeks ago, and is said by his son to be in St. Paul on a vacation. Telegraphic inquiry failed to reveal his presence there. Following a meeting of the bank's directors held in Irving Park, at which President Steinland, the son, explained that the depositors would be paid "dollar for dollar," Steinland, Junior, and a companion entered a closed carriage and were driven to the residence of the senior Steinland. Later Steinland Junior refused to make known the identity of his companion, and has said it has been none of his business to find the president.

Bank Examiner Jones, who is in charge of the wrecked institution, thinks Steinland should be arrested.

"I do not see why the directors of the bank did not cause the arrest of President Steinland, Mr. Jones said. "He at least had guilty knowledge."

Not Likely to Open Again.

Examiner Jones made the following statement after he had examined the condition of the bank:

"The chances are against the banks opening again. I don't remember of one of the fifty banks which have closed, liquidated or gone out of business in Chicago in the last twenty years that has opened again.

"I don't understand why the directors have not sworn out a warrant for President Steinland. He certainly had guilty knowledge and he has plainly injured the depositors."

Twenty-two thousand depositors and $4,000,000 in deposits, nearly all representing the life savings of working people of meagre capital and of small business men tells the story of Steinland's crash.

Wailing and Threats in Crowd.

Excited depositors gathered about the bank building, in Milwaukee avenue, early to-day and watched the doors in the vain hope that they would be opened and that heaps of gold and silver currency that had been greeted the bank's patrons in the past would again be in evidence. The police kept order, but there was wailing and sobbing in the crowd and many threats of violence.

This section of the northwest side is always garrisoned in a business way by the disorderly element. Two deaths, one from heart disease, the other by suicide, as the result of the first day's news of the failure, may have tragic repetition during the day, as the smaller depositors are frantic with excitement. Two women have reported that they already have been made homeless by their losses.

MOB OF 3,000 HANG AND BURN SIX NEGROES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SALISBURY, N. C., Aug. 7. While the State militia fired blank cartridges and the county Judge and sheriff looked on, powerless to stay the mob, 3,000 strong, broke into the Rowan county jail here, seized five negro men and one woman, hanged them to trees and riddled their bodies with bullets. Three were lynched beneath the bodies.

Lawless as was the proceeding, it was conducted in an orderly, methodical fashion. John McLendon, a railway fireman; Beckeman Sells and Will Trentman, all white men of the crowd, were shot by stray bullets from the mob, and these were the only features of the affair that were not down on the program.

Sheriff Julian, Jailer Kelder and fifty deputies made a determined effort to prevent entrance to the jail, but the mob appeared from the outset that the white men were determined that there should be no bloodshed among themselves.

Jail Doors Battered Down.

The actual storming of the jail was effected by fifty men, who formed a flying wedge, and, bringing great logs to bear upon the grated doors, battered and twisted them out of place. Three thousand other men stood back and watched the attack.

The negroes were found cowering in their cells, too frightened to make any outcries. They were dragged out and hurried through the crowd, which made way for them and contented itself with hooting.

The first halt was made at the ball grounds on the edge of the town. Here an effort was made to get confessions from the negroes. George Knox, John Gillespie and Jack Billingham, the three negroes who were regarded as the leaders in the murder, were ranged in a row and prodded with sharp sticks in an effort to force them to talk, but the black men were in such terror that they could not utter a word. The remaining negroes, Henry Lee, George Ervin and Bella Billingham, wife of Jack, were then put through a similar process, but the chattering of their teeth was the only sound that came from them.

The procession went steadily on. The village of Spencer had been almost reached when the leader of the crowd stopped, and, passing into a large tree with wide spreading branches sprouting out almost horizontally, he exclaimed grimly:

"I guess that will hold six, boys."

Ropes seemed to spring out of the air. Preparations to hang a hundred men at once were quickly made, the ropes were flung over the lower branches, and within three minutes six dark forms were dangling in the air.

CITY GORGEOUS IN GARLANDS AND FLOWERS

MYRIAD ELECTRIC LIGHTS

Special to the Boston American.

NEWPORT, Aug. 7.—This "summer capital" of smart society in the midst of its carnival week has reached the acme of the maddest, merriest season in its history.

The city is tricked out in festal splendor. By day it is gorgeous with bunting, banners, garlands and flowers. By night it glows and sparkles with a myriad of electric lights.

The presence of "Fighting Bob" Evans' big fleet of warships adds greatly to the spectacular and social brilliance of the week.

The harbor is filled with the yachts of the New York club, which are illuminated at night with splendid effect.

Smart Set in a Merry Round.

The smart set is busy with dinners, fêtes, the yacht races, the great "society circus," Mardi Gras night, which is expected to rout New Orleans completely in the shade, and a thousand and one devices for novel excitement.

One of the most sparkling innovations that society has adopted to enliven the carnival week is the "champagne dance," and its popularity is so great that its vogue is likely to last through the whole season.

A lithe girl appears on a dais at the close of a merry champagne dinner and after a giddy dance in sparkling, silvery drapery she reaches the climax by leaping to the top of a "fizz" bottle, where she poises herself gracefully on one toe, while the diners toast her in bubbling breakers.

The common people are flocking here in thousands to enjoy the marvelous sights and to do their share in promoting the carnival.

The electrical illuminations are planned on a scale never before dreamed of in this home of prodigal wealth and lavish display. The public parks are transformed to bewildering fairylands through the medium of garlands of twinkling, glowing incandescent lights. These bulbs shine from the loftiest branches of the stately trees and hang in clusters over archways, doors and gates.

City Aglow With Color.

It is doubtful if any city was ever more gorgeously decorated. There is not a building of any kind on Thames street, Broadway and Bellevue avenue, the three main business thoroughfares, that is not hung with bunting. Many other buildings on the side streets are also decorated. Last night when the electric lights were turned on Thames street from all above Thousands of electric lamps in red, white and blue were strung from house across the street from one end to the other. The street presented a bower of flags and light, and the showers of confetti that passed the promenaders finished off the carnival effect.

Crowds See Auto Races.

The only event of yesterday was the series of automobile races which were held on Bachmut beach, where a fine course one mile in length was laid out. Over 3,000 persons gathered there, but the full card could not be carried out as several of the fastest machines expected were on the steamer Puritan, which was delayed off New London.

In a big field of riders S. T. Kellogg of Springfield carried off the honors in the event for motor cycles. William T. Bowker, who won the first heat in 1:4 3-5, beat Kellogg's time made in the final by nearly 5-5, but when the two came together Kellogg won a fairly easy victory. The only other good race was that for stock touring cars in road condition, in which R. H. Buckingham beat L. E. N. Baldwin by a few feet.

The best time heretofore made in Rhode Island for a mile was beaten by L. E. N. Baldwin in a Stanley steamer. He went over the course, which was carefully surveyed and measured, in fifty seconds flat. Robert Goelet made an exhibition mile in his twenty-four horsepower Renault in 1m. 42 2-5s.

The crowds in town last night for events expectations. The Trolley cars from Providence, Fall River and New Bedford brought hundreds and at 8 o'clock Thames street in places seemed packed. Washington square, where band concert was given, held several thousands and the lawns and the fakirs made a great din. In the bay the warships and the extraordinary large fleet of yachts was illuminated.

TROOPS AND SAILORS NOW NEAR MUTINY

Czar's Chiefs at Odessa Prepare for Uprising on Army and Navy.

TARTARS IN PITCHED FIGHT

LONDON, Aug. 7. Despatches from Odessa are causing [illegible] grave concern.

Unmistakable signs of mutiny are apparent among the troops and navy.

Admiral Skrydleff, commanding the Black Sea fleet, now mobilized at Sevastopol, is fearful of an uprising among the sailors and precautionary measures have been taken. Breechlocks have been removed from the fortress and warship guns, and guards have been doubled to watch for the expected outbreak.

Fires From Odessa.

Twenty thousand people have left Odessa in the past week and the exodus continues. The troops in the garrisons there are showing signs of unrest and stringent measures prevail against mutiny. Peasants throughout the district are said to be preparing for the general election by Revolutionary agitators are preaching the doctrine of strife through many of the villages and police and secret service men have been busy making hundreds of arrests.

Advices from Tiflis show that the Tartars are taking advantage of internal disorder. Reports of a pitched battle Sunday night have been received from the district chief of Sangezur to General Golowchikapod. The Tartars attacked Russian troops, the combat lasting until 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. The Tartars were 2,000 strong and occupied very favorable positions. The extent of their loss is not known.

White Flag a Ruse.

After a prolonged bombardment by the Russians the Tartars hoisted the white flag, but the district chief learned that this was a ruse, and that the Tartars are preparing for a night attack. He therefore altered the position of his troops under the cover of darkness to meet the emergency.

Another message from the district chief of Sangezur says the village of Hassanlar is surrounded by Tartars and appeals for reinforcements from Shusha.

Unofficial reports from Baku say several soldiers, mostly Armenians and many Tartars have been killed there the record encounters having been on Friday.

Tartar positions were occupied by the Russian troops yesterday and the Tartars are now preparing peace.

Call for Revolution.

A joint manifesto calling the country to revolution has been issued by the Social Democrats, labor parties, Polish, Jewish and various revolutionary boards at St. Petersburg.

It says in part:

"Citizens, in whom all freedom is dear, we call upon you to a decisive struggle against the present Emperor and his government and the authorities appointed by them.

"Long live the general strike and the decisive struggle for political power."

ALIMONY CUT TO $9; CONTEMPT DISMISSED

BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 7. An order was received here today from Judge W. W. Miles, relative to the contempt proceedings brought by Dr. J. W. Morrow, a specialist, against his wife, Mrs. Almeda Morrow. In March Judge Miles ordered that his wife was to contribute $15 per week and also $25 for counsel fees to have the contempt proceedings dismissed. Dr. Morrow alleged that his wife was in contempt in not permitting him to see their children. He also asked that the weekly alimony reduced from $15 to $12 per week, on the ground that he is being robbed of his business and about him by his wife. The contempt proceedings against him were dismissed and the alimony was reduced to $9 per week.

HUSBAND HAS HIS WIFE ARRESTED AS A BURGLAR

Police Declare That They Have, in Mrs. Nellie Troiano, a Clever False Key Worker.

Charged With Larceny of $100 Worth of Clothing from South Boston Tailor.

With the arrest of Mrs. Nellie Troiano, thirty-three years of age, of No. 317 West Fourth street, South Boston, the police declare that they have a clever false key worker in custody. Mrs. Troiano was arrested on information furnished the police by her husband. She is charged with the larceny of $100 worth of clothing from Antonie Sakalosky, a custom tailor of No. 317 West Fourth street, South Boston. Arraigned in court today, her case was continued until August 13. Bail was fixed at $500.

Several days ago the police arrested Mrs. Mary Mullen of Silver street on the same charge. When arraigned in court she swore that she did not steal the clothing but received it from a woman named Nellie. She could not tell the woman's other name. For several days since the police have been looking for the mysterious Nellie, and not until yesterday, when they arrested Mrs. Troiano, upon the request of her husband, had they met with any success in their search.

In order to gain entrance to the door where the clothing was stolen, the police assert that the prisoner must have been in possession of a set of false keys. A portion of the clothing she is supposed to have given Mrs. Mullen to pawn, and the rest, which consisted of three pairs of trousers, she took to her own tenement, it is declared.

She succeeded in keeping these hidden from her husband for two or three days, but he says he finally discovered them. He questioned her sharply as to where they came from. To save she finally admitted that she had stolen the stuff. He refused to listen to her explanation, proceeded to the police and demanded that they arrest her.

The woman's motive, according to the husband, was to get money for drink. He asserts that he had always given her money enough, but never any for drink. Now he declares he wants nothing more to do with her, and that he will not help her in any way.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF BEING A BURGLAR.

CRAPO OFFERS TO TAKE MANY STRIKERS BACK

Final Proposal Made to New Bedford Trolleymen by Company President.

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 7. At a conference today between President Henry H. Crapo of the New Bedford Gas and Edison Light company, and representatives of the Central Labor Union and the striking conductors and motormen, the former made a very liberal proposition to the strikers. It is now being considered at strike headquarters.

President Crapo's offer is that he take back as many of the strikers as he needs, which will probably mean about 50 men. He will not, however, take back, so far as the striking cause of wages goes, which is based on the demand for $2.50 for a nine hour day, going back to the old rate before the men struck, which was $2.25.

The conference was in President Crapo's office and lasted for two hours. Present were Samuel Ives, William Hall and James F. Monaghan, all of whom were accompanied by President William E. Leary and I. Taylor of the executive committee of the Central Labor Union. The conference began at 9:40 and lasted two hours. The strikers committee came down to the meeting in autos. An executive session of the union was held this morning to hear the report from the committee.

Much depends upon the result of this session. The continuation of the already long period of idleness, which has caused suffering in the men and their families, to the business men of the city, and to the city itself, is a serious settlement may be at hand. A compromise which, while it may not be entirely satisfactory to the men, may be acceptable and will thus put a stop to the present trouble.

Thousands of persons are walking many miles daily, as the cars are not running. It will welcome the ending of the strike, during which time the business men of the town, for they refuse to patronize the cars, that are being run by strikebreakers.

The strikers' cause addressed yesterday by Edward Moffitt of the Boston Central Labor union, Treasurer Lane of the local union called to-day that contributions were coming in so fast that contributions were coming in so fast that $50 was received from the Boston Central Labor union. He said that the men knew that they could feed and support their families, and that they felt certain that the strikers would be victorious in the end.

LIFE AND BEAUTY BY DAY AND NIGHT

NEWPORT, Aug. 7.—The chief feature of to-day in Newport Carnival Week is the parade of 3,000 school children in the afternoon, during the exercises by the children they elect the Queen of the Carnival, and on Thursday evening she will ride in a great chariot seated upon a throne made from flowers contributed by the Newport Horticultural Society.

The yacht race, in which many yachts of the New York Yacht Club will compete for the magnificent cup offered by King Edward VII. of England, will be sailed to-morrow. The greatest gathering of white-winged yachts ever seen, where the white wings are common, shows that this event will easily be the crowning sporting contest of the entire week.

To-morrow afternoon there will be the imposing military and naval parades, made up of the men of the North Atlantic squadron, all the army and naval stations at Newport and the full State militia. This pageant alone will comprise over 3,000 men. There will be ten bands in the long line of parade.

The wondrous harbor fete is to be celebrated to-morrow evening. This pageant, over which will be cast the glamour and beauty of multitudes of colored lights, will be participated in by hundreds of boats and launches gaily decorated and beautifully and effectively illuminated.

Carnival Yacht Race.

The carnival yacht race will be run on Thursday morning. This is to be open to all of the boats of Narragansett Bay. From the number of good entries made up this time, and there will be doubtless many more, it will be a great success.

The great night carnival parade, in which countless splendidly garbed floats will be a part, will take place on Thursday evening. There will be fifty organizations in line, each one having one or more floats.

Mardi Gras Outdone.

Thursday night will be the Mardi Gras or carnival night, free for all merry-makers, for everybody will be in mask and costume. It is expected that the famous Mardi Gras of New Orleans will be fairly outdone. Another feature of Thursday night, the great night of the carnival parade, will be the automobile floral parade, and a superb show can well be looked for, for the automobiles and floats will be gay flowers are among the whole wide, wide world.

The "Society Circus" is to be given in the main tent, 180 by 100 feet, which easily seats 5,000 spectators. The box parties for the circus here and with the season, too, to outdo any and all previous functions of the week. There is to be a regular forty foot circus ring, conducted by Bishop & Scranberg, of New York.

Every evening at 11 o'clock there will be an exhibition by the Norins, who will dive from a platform of 120 feet, enveloped in flames, into a shallow tank of water. Immediately this time has shown its human side and democracy by liberal contributions to the promotion of the circus.

MAYOR WANTS CITY TO OWN GAS PLANT

Discrimination Against Central Falls Charged Against Pawtucket Gas Company.

Special to the Boston American.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 7.—Mayor Thomas McNally recommends that the city adopt municipal ownership of gas lighting and the appointment of alleged discrimination against Central Falls consumers by the Pawtucket Gas Company.

That company has just closed a fifteen year contract with Pawtucket, Lincoln and Cumberland by which those places in return for an exclusive fifteen year franchise can buy gas at the rate of $1 to per thousand feet the first five years, $1.05 for second five years, and $1 flat the third five years. This is reduced from the original price of $1.10.

The same privilege was offered Central Falls, but was declined. Central Falls is still charged the old $1.40 rate which is the difference in combination in the hands of Mayor McNally and the city council.

At last night's meeting of the board of aldermen a communication was received from Mayor McNally stating that, in his mind, the best solution was for the city to own and operate a gas plant of its own. Alderman Joseph Pigeon said the matter should be brought before the people for their vote. It is probable that further action toward municipal lighting will be taken soon.

CHAMPAGNE DANCE A FIZZING NOVELTY

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 7.—The "champagne" toe dance is the latest fad of the society set, and some of the principal leaders among the wealthy women are preparing to entertain their guests soon with this terpsichorean novelty. It has been given once at Narragansett Pier.

The champagne toe dance was introduced into New York by Miss Ethel Amorita Kelly, a lithe and supple young woman who can gracefully pose on the neck of a champagne bottle.

In the dance a champagne dinner is indispensable. The places at the table are expensive entertainments in the beginning. At one end of the room a dais is usually provided for the champagne dancer.

After the dinner is practically over and the diners are willing to be diverted with something less material than food, the champagne dancer is summoned. At the same time care is taken that every diner has the champagne glass filled.

The dancer enters. Her skirt, usually of white or silver color, is so long that the dancer whirls and spins, the folds and flounces of the skirt flash and sparkle in the light like the liquid champagne itself.

The dancer begins slowly, dancing faster and faster to show the joy and exhilaration that champagne drinkers. The climax comes when, with a great bound, the dancer springs with one foot to the top of a champagne bottle which has been placed on the dais. She stands on the slender neck of the bottle on tiptoe. The other foot is pointed out to balance her.

And, as she dances to the top of the bottle and encircles her neck, the diners drink the foaming liquid to her health.

TAKES PIRATE IN STERN CHASE

After a five days' cruise about the South Shore, the "pirate of Boston harbor," Charles Pelger of Chester, ended his career on the briny deep by abandoning the yacht Hadda at Plymouth when pursuit became too hot.

He was captured, and after spending last night in a cell, will be arraigned here to-day.

The mystery yacht, as she was termed, bore the name H. [illegible] h. Her actions aroused curiosity and then investigation.

The owner, Everett K. Jones of Brooklyn, missed his yacht, the Hadda, and the dimensions tallied with the description of the H. [illegible] h, so he hustled down and identified her.

SNAPSHOTS OF HAPPY GROUPS AT WONDERLAND, WHERE THOUSANDS FOUND RELIEF FROM THE HEAT.

GIRL RIDES WILD HORSE AT WONDERLAND

Miss Shaffer in Daring Feat as Thousands of American Guests Applaud.

"SKY ROCKET" SUBDUED

While Boston was sweltering under the fortieth wave yesterday, thousands of persons visited Wonderland as guests of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, where, soothed by the cooling breezes from the sea, they enjoyed a day of unceasing pleasure. It was truly a day of surprises. The visitors had little or no idea of the treat that was in store for them and each of the spectacular arrays of entertainments that was furnished was marked with hearty appreciation. Noticeable among the throngs were many happy families. Many mothers took their little ones to Wonderland, where they escaped the terrific heat and enjoyed to the fullest extent the sights and the reviving sea air.

Of course the interest centered in "Wild Bill" Kennedy's Wild West Show, where those who cut the coupons from the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN were entertained by a show of the scenes of Western life that surpassed anything they ever saw before. The show was strengthened by the presence of a carload of real bucking broncbos from the plains and by the presence of Miss Annie Shaffer, a young woman who has yet to see the horse she cannot master.

A Marvel in Riding.

Mounted on her big, bay bronche "Sky Rocket," whose sole object seemed to be to fling the fair rider to the ground, she sat on the saddle with apparent ease and seemed nothing but amusement from the vast audience. Miss Shaffer jumped as bride into pony after it had been saddled with much difficulty. The animal began its tactics by lying down and attempting to scrape its rider from its back. But this it jumped up and ran a short distance, then stopped suddenly, jumped in the air, stood up on its hind feet and then leaped toward the audience, bucking and wrenching all the while.

"Sky Rocket" reared and the earth about five feet and turned half around while in the air, and during all this time the young woman rode without once touching her hands to the saddle.

Miss Shaffer is rightly named "Queen of the Cowgirls." Her pony "Sky Rocket" at Wonderland is the hardest bucking horse in the world, and arrived at Wonderland with a carload of other horses on Sunday. This lively specimen of horseflesh was found at Link 4 Ranch, Texas, and was bought for $51. Miss Shaffer has refused an offer of $5,000 for him, and it has been asked by a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN regarding her hazardous riding, Miss Shaffer said that she enjoyed it as much as, if not more than, any of the spectators. Asked why she didn't cling to the saddle with both hands when bucking the fiercest, she replied naively: "That would be too dangerous, and I would rather be thrown any time than to 'pull leather.'"

Always Loved Horses.

"Where did I learn to ride? Well, my father was a ranchman and my work was always with him. I was born near Fort Worth, Texas, at a time when there were nothing but ranchers, horses and cattle there. I always have loved a horse and I can't remember when I learned to ride. Of course, I rode gentle horses at first. I will never forget the first bucker I tackled.

"At the Polo Steer Roping Club at Fort Worth there was a bucking horse and the owners had offered $5 for a rider. After one of the boys was thrown I volunteered to raise a purse. I asked them what they would give me if I rode the horse and they said $25. I was game and I got on the bronche, got my hand and got the money. Then, thinking that was so easy, I purchased the horse the very next day. The first time I mounted him I was thrown. Since that time I have been riding bucking broncbos.

"My father was in the 'run' at the opening of Oklahoma and secured a homestead, but on account of the death of two of my brothers and three sisters from the fever he gave it up and with it the cattle business. We moved to Wyoming, Pa., to reside. But the simple life was too much for me after the strenuous life, and I went into riding horses before the public.

"I did straight rides in Buffalo Bill's show for three years and I rode with Pawnee Bill for two years and Frank James for one year. I was with the exhibition at Forth Worth in 1904, when the cowboys were craving something real exciting. I offered to ride a wild steer without a rope or bridle. I accomplished this and they sent Will A. Dillingham, who had broken the world's record for roping and tying down a steer in the shortest time.

Have Tamed Wild Steers.

"I appeared with him, roping wild steers and horses in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and other States. Mr. Dillingham offered $500 for a steer that I could not ride. I had ninety-six to try credit that season and got $25 for each steer. Last year, with the "White City," in Chicago, I rode 700 bucking horses.

"I will remain here at Wonderland all this season and then the Winter I expect to my home at Chickasha, Indian Territory. I have a standing offer of $1,000 for anyone who will bring a wild horse I cannot ride. I will in turn give him $100 who will ride Sky Rocker and keep him from bucking. And I will offer $500 per minute to anyone who will ride him and not touch the saddle while he is bucking, and $100 per minute to anyone who will ride him even by clinging to the saddle.

One of the new features which has been introduced for the pleasure of visitors to Wonderland is a veritable "dip of death" which is performed by Mlle. Loubet of France. This prepossessing young woman lies prone on a small auto which is started down a sharp decline and around a long loop. This is a sensation which all visitors to Wonderland appreciate. The young woman performs every evening this week, with additional performances Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

HEAT ADDS TO PLEASURES AT KEITH THEATRE

Heat merely adds to the pleasures of an entertainment at Keith's Theatre, so the house was crowded at both performances yesterday. One never realizes that it is hot outside, for the refrigerating air makes the theatre (seats decrees cooler at Scollan outdoors).

The bill this week is a big one, full of snap and go. Chief attraction is the Zeno pet troupe, vocalists, who present a specialty of vocal novelty of great life. There are eight artists in the act, and the curtain rises on a gypsy camp, with the wanderers gathered about the camp fire. The scenic investiture is elaborate and handsome, and the illusion is complete. The comedy section of the bill is headed by Eddie Mazette, assisted by Jules Kuseli, in the comedy sketch, "A Honeymoon in the Catskills," in which the dialogue is crisp and funny and the situations decidedly amusing. Ray Cox told stories of the ghetto, sang several catchy songs and in her impersonation of Bert Williams scored a hit. Clifford and Burke, Dixon and Anger, Bailey and his dog, Ben Beyer, the trick cyclist and the Fadettes, with new music, complete the bill. The kinetograph displayed a new list of motion pictures.

"MARTHA" IS SWEET AS EVER

As fresh, sparkling and sweet as ever, Flotow's "Martha" was given by the Castle Square Opera Company last evening to an audience that packed the house, and more kept coming to swell the crowd. The Castle Square Company has steadily improved with each week, and seems now to have reached the top wave of ability and success. The performance last evening assured this.

Miss Mary Carrington sang the rose role with excellent taste, and that old song, "The Last Rose," was greeted with tumultuous applause.

George Tallman sang the role Lionel and his song, "Like a Dream," was encored repeatedly. Also Mr. Luckstone's drinking song, "Hatti Hatti Laldi," was encore-worthy just as she sings every thing, perfectly and the chorus did well with the ancient and worn "props" as it could while singing delightfully.

IDEAL PERFORMANCE OF "NEW MAGDALEN"

Lillian Lawrence can, it seems, play emotional roles better even in hot weather than in cold, for, as Mercy Merrick in "The New Magdalen," at the Grand Opera House day she was stronger, more convincing and more satisfying than ever before. She has a wonderful grasp of the part, and yesterday showed its effects, giving an ideal performance.

Gertrude Berkeley, who joined the cast this week, played the unsympathetic part of Grace in a very satisfactory manner, especially in the strong scene between the two women. Mr. MacIntire was a dignified clergyman and Mr. Houghton a cadaverous Englishman. Leah Winslow did a capital bit as Lady Janet.

GAMBLER'S DAUGHTER APPEALS TO PATRONS

A play that appealed to the tastes of the patrons of the Bowdoin Square Theatre was "The Gambler's Daughter," one of the delightful type of melodramas, full of interest, action, love, romance, villainy and self-sacrifice. Gertrude Binley played the leading role, a young woman handicapped by her father's wrongs. Charles Miller played the leading role with vigor. Every other person in the cast deserves the applause the huge audience bestowed.

Grand Opera House

A bigger bit even than on its opening night was "Bertha, the Sewing Machine girl," at the Grand Opera House last night. The players were more at home in their roles, the villain was more villainous, the sweet girl victim was more sweet, and the exciting scenes with the motor boat, the fire engines, the automobiles, etc., were even more surprising. Bertha will continue to delight, every evening this week, with additional performances Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Tremont Theatre

On Monday night, August 20, Harry Bulger and Henry W. Savage's company in the musical fantasy, "The Man From Now," will observe its one hundredth performance at the Tremont Theatre, and on that night the occasion will be fittingly commemorated by the distribution of souvenirs to all the women in the audience. The production to-day is in better shape than it has been at any time since its first performance, several new songs and scenes having been introduced. The last performance in Boston is scheduled for Saturday night. August 25, when Mr. Bulger and his associates go to the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York.

Palace Theatre

Although the weather is of the kind that turns one's thoughts to the seashore, the Palace Theatre held two good-sized audiences yesterday. The stock company is presented in a bright musical burlesque entitled "In Vacation Time," while the bur lesque is a humorous satire on "Hiawatha." The vaudeville part presents Allen Wight with his ultra modelling, Barry Pasmore and Lucie Boyle in comedy sketch, the Lavoar brothers, acrobatic act; the Wilsons with dancing and new Dunn moving pictures.

First to Really Navigate Air, Dr. Thomas Tells of

BALLOON TRIP BETWEEN TWO CITIES

With Knabenshue in Big Airship He Lands at Will and Resumes Journey Nearly to Destination.

The first successful aerial distance voyage, terminated only when the course of the balloon met the ocean, was that accomplished by Dr. Julian P. Thomas and Roy Knabenshue when they started from New York and landed at Brant Rock, near Marshfield.

In their 225-mile flight these two daring navigators of the air stopped once only when they wanted water, dropped their car near to earth when they wanted to find out near what town they were. It is indeed by far the most successful trip, and probably the first of such length under such conditions ever taken in this country.

It was a thrilling trip for both men experienced aerial navigators as they are. At no time did they believe themselves in great danger, although they encountered things which would have made less experienced ones quail. In the finish they were both dropped from their car when the balloon, life preserver, and the next instant we passed over a house which we later learned was Daniel Webster's old home in Marshfield. After clearing the house we struck a cold current, which dashed us down rapidly, our guide rope striking the old Webster barn, and we took a hurried glance at the finish of the great staircase. We struck the ground soon after, and the balloon began to bump so hard that we feared dire results.

The anchor would catch in the soft marsh turf and check the flight of the air ship for an instant, and then the advantage would give way and we would plunge forward like a ship in a sea.

Six times in rapid succession we struck the ground and were tossed about like corks on an angry sea.

We shouted for the people below to hold on to the guide rope, but that was almost out of the question.

Anchors Fail to Hold.

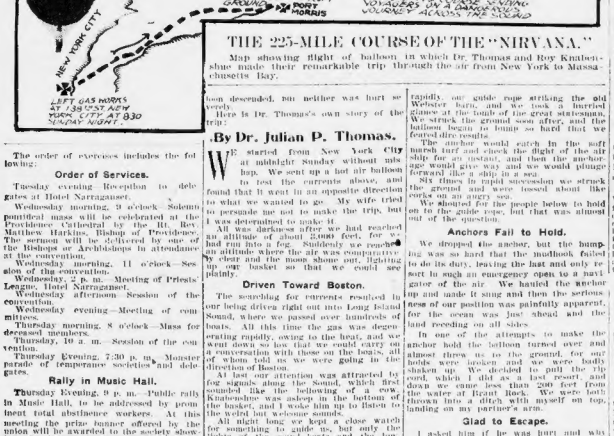
We dropped the anchor, but the bumping was so hard that the mudhook failed to do its duty, leaving the last and only resort to such an emergency open to a navigator of the air. We hauled the anchor up and made it sing and then the seriousness of our position was painfully apparent, for the ocean was just ahead and the land receding on all sides.

In one of the attempts to make the anchor hold the balloon turned over and almost threw us to the ground, for our holds were broken and we were badly shaken up. We decided to pull the ripcord, which I did as a last resort, and down we came less than 2000 feet from the water of Brant Rock. We were both thrown into a ditch with myself on top, landing on my partner's arm.

Glad to Escape.

I asked him if he was hurt and why he did not get up, but he coolly said "I will get up and report my condition when you get off my arm."

I found Mr. Knabenshue had sustained several slight injuries, and I had received a few hard knocks myself. We were thankful to escape so well and found the required about 50 bags to remove it to a place so accommodating as a railroad station. Our basket and car were safe and dry there. A dozen more took charge of the balloon, which, when fully packed, was 12½ feet in the station and it and forwarded it to New York.



THE 225-MILE COURSE OF THE "NIRVANA."

Map showing flight of balloon in which Dr. Thomas and Roy Knabenshue made their remarkable trip through the air from New York to Massachusetts Bay.

"We Will Yet Fly from New York to Boston in Balloon."

OUR ascent was a most thrilling and delightful record breaking balloon trip. We tried hard to reach Boston. We are not disheartened. There is plenty of time to make another effort. We feel confident of making a successful trip from New York to Boston sometime in the future.

JULIAN P. THOMAS, M. D.,
ROY KNABENSHUE.

By Dr. Julian P. Thomas.

WE started from New York City at midnight Sunday without any fuss. We went up a lot in the balloon to test the currents above, and found that it went in an opposite direction to that we wanted to go. My wife tried to persuade me not to make the trip, but I was determined to make it.

All was darkness after we had reached an altitude of about 2,000 feet, for we had left gas bag. Suddenly we reached an altitude where the air was comparatively clear and the moon shone out, lighting up the basket so that we could see plainly.

Driven Toward Boston.

The scrambling for currents resulted in our being driven right out into Long Island Sound, where we passed over hundreds of boats. All this time the gas was decreasing rapidly, owing to the heat, and we went down so low that we could carry on a conversation with those on the ground, for one of whom told us we were going in the direction of Boston.

At last our attention was attracted by fog signals along the Sound, which first sounded like the bellowing of a cow. Lighthouses were always in the bottom of the basket, and I woke him up to listen to the weird but welcome sounds.

All night long we kept a close watch for something to guide us, but only the lights of the sound boats and the lonesome, weird grunting of the foghorns were all we could see or hear.

Guide Rope in Water.

During this time we were traveling with our guide rope touching the water 2000 feet below and about 50 feet of the rope trailing in the water. After rousing my partner I dropped into the bottom of the basket and fell asleep, with the balloon slowly lifting. I slept until morning and was awakened by something that beggared description. The water or moisture began to collect in the neck of the balloon right over my head, and in one of those sudden shifts of the wind the contents were emptied on my head.

I thought that we must be at sea, but could hear the trains and the whistles shriek a warning at the crossings. My senses were brought into play but failed, as our naked eyes had, to discover land. Finally a point of land hove in sight and we finally discerned the waves washing on both sides of this narrow strip of land. Houses again came into view and trees and vegetation presented a more hopeful outlook for us after the long weary night.

Breakfast at Noank.

As the airship slowly settled down over the houses I called to the people below, threw out our ground rope and as a result a crowd of men and women came out in force and stocking feet, took hold of the rope and we turned a handle, which brought the balloon slowly down. This was better than accepting the aeronaut's invitation to breakfast in the Sound, for we had landed in the town of Noank and in the yard of Tilton Eldridge, a most hospitable man, who entertained us at breakfast at 5:30.

We ascended again and went into the fog. We were told that after crossing water we would strike a body of land. We accordingly started higher and higher and were travelling through the air at a great speed all the time we were allowing gas to escape.

Shortly after this we had a novel experience, for we got caught in three currents near the face of a mountain, which sent us up like a rocket.

Talked to People Below.

We talked to thousands of people as we passed over Warwick, R. I., and then we took a turn at soaring to get over the city until we had reached an altitude of 12,000 feet. Our balloon had reached a tremendous height when we saw a trail of smoke signalling a current of wind below in which we were most anxious to get.

Slowly we descended until we passed over the city of Providence which was about 10 a. m. Our next point of interest was a city in which we could see a prison and soldiers doing guard duty on the high walls which enclosed it and assumed that it was Taunton.

At length we alighted a Summer resort and began to descend for about fifteen minutes, but struck a current of wind going forty miles an hour, which carried us along.

Face Peril of Sea.

We lowered the water anchor, fixed the rapidly, our guide rope striking the old Webster barn, and we took a hurried glance at the finish of the great staircase. We struck the ground soon after, and the balloon began to bump so hard that we feared dire results.

The anchor would catch in the soft marsh turf and check the flight of the air ship for an instant, and then the advantage would give way and we would plunge forward like a ship in a sea.

Six times in rapid succession we struck the ground and were tossed about like corks on an angry sea.

We shouted for the people below to hold on to the guide rope, but that was almost out of the question.

Anchors Fail to Hold.

We dropped the anchor, but the bumping was so hard that the mudhook failed to do its duty, leaving the last and only resort to such an emergency open to a navigator of the air. We hauled the anchor up and made it sing and then the seriousness of our position was painfully apparent, for the ocean was just ahead and the land receding on all sides.

BEEF TRUST ON NAVY RACK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7. The inquiry into the charges that the Beef Trust is furnishing decayed meat to the war vessels at the Brooklyn Navy Yard is expected to develop sensational facts.

Rear Admiral Coghlan's action in convening the special board of inquiry resulted from the complaints of the officers and crews of the cruiser Colorado and the receiving ship Hancock that the meat was being supplied to them was the worst of beef, pork and mutton. Although the full complaint has not been made public, it is known that stewards and cooks are ready to testify to astonishing conditions.

P. J. RAINEY TO WED MISS FISH?

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 7. The announcement of the engagement of Miss Marion, daughter of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, to Paul J. Rainey of Cleveland and New York, which society expects at the dinner dance to be given Saturday, is the one topic of conversation at Newport to-day.

A month ago this rumor was prevalent, but Mrs. Fish denied it, but it is now asserted that the announcement was reserved as a surprise to add zest to the dance.

SWITCHMEN IN NEW HAVEN QUIT

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Aug. 7. All the switchmen in the New Haven yards struck to-day because half a dozen of their men were discharged. There was a tie-up of trains near Cedar Hill, largely because of the confused condition of the tracks, owing to the new cut being constructed for all the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad through the city. At 9 o'clock this morning there were three wrecks and a tie-up of the road to-day here. The strike will affect only the freight yards here.

BERGER IS O'BRIEN'S HANDICAP

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7. Whatever Sam Berger's fulcrument thoughts may be in regard to a match with Jack O'Brien, and there is no disguising the fact that the native son's tactics are subjecting him to a good deal of criticism, there is ample to show that O'Brien would win everything else in the shape of a fistic engagement for the privilege of hopping into the ring a second time with the stalwart Californian.

There is good reason, of course, for O'Brien being dissatisfied with the present condition of affairs. Not so many weeks ago O'Brien was cock of the walk, and Berger was unknown.

So much did O'Brien loom above other American heavyweights that he was selected by the Australian matchmakers as the man to meet Jeffy Bill Squires in faraway Melbourne for the championship of the world.

The six-round affair in Philadelphia upset everything. Berger did not win and O'Brien didn't win. In good old Philadelphia, as I understand it, referees are unknown, and the semi-colder is called a referee. It is a case of "Yer pays yer money and yer takes yer choice." My opinions that are aired at the ring side are largely partisan and one yawp offsets another.

Berger the Latest Hero.

When theatrical agents reach out for a boxer, however, there is some reason for it. It shows something unexpected has happened, and that the public is willing to pay money to see some bald boxer across the footlights. And that's what the matter with Berger. However experts may disagree as to the relative merits of Jack O'Brien hooks and Sam Berger's uppercuts, the quiet thousands who never see the inside of a boxing arena have centered the notion that Berger, the unknown, has acquitted himself wonderfully well and that he is the latest hero to put gilliam.

Jack O'Brien resents this turning of strange gods on the part of the public. It dims the lustre of O'Brien's former triumph in the ring, and it is to certain extent overlaid with his Australian plans. He regrets probably that it is hardly feasible to set out in search of new worlds to conquer as long as there is a double skulled guy having conquered the old one.

Cool-headed and resourceful as is Jack O'Brien, this Berger episode has placed him rather in the position of the backbone of Cerebus of this city. He makes it clear that he would rather make any sacrifice in order to bring about a bonafide championship contest between Berger and Ketchel. He refers to the humorous offer Berger has received for a bout with O'Brien in this city on September 10. He agrees that by defeating Jim Sam Francisco before a bodyless crowd Berger could make more money than he could gather in a solid year of theatrical work. Jack O'Brien wishes to wait upon promoters again, and to leave no stone unturned in order to bring about his vaudeville engagement and sign articles for the September date.

Willing to Hurry Home.

He says: "I will make every effort to see Berger's manager at this end, and if nothing comes of it I think I'll find away the money and hurry over to England. Hobe Victoria, London promoter, and a message containing the slight word 'signed' would bring me back in haste. I could be training at the way across. He will come to San Francisco, so that if I arrived about August 28 it would give me two months to train for Berger. I would be sufficient to put me in trim, as I had but ten days for Kaufmann.

That dark cut on the eye from Sam Berger's manager may be charged from the fact that O'Brien is now training for Berger. He is not likely to be matched to box Berger in September, and it is probable that his Australian trip will be cancelled for the present. He will remain here for the fall and at the same time enjoy the excitement of hooking over the Berger bowlers. What will become of the O'Brien-Berger championship fight goodness only knows, for by the time Sam gets ready to enter the ring O'Brien may be in Johannesburg or Van Diemen's land.

FORD HAS HEARING.

Frank J. W. Ford, the leader of the movement for better prizes for the amateur athletes, was given a hearing yesterday afternoon before the executive committee of the N. E. A. A. U., at the office of E. E. Babb. For more than an hour Ford was questioned by the men who carefully gone over, and on Wednesday afternoon the registration committee will decide whether or not Ford is to be reinstated.

TAYLOR MADE A RECORD.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 7.—H. Taylor of the Chadderton No. 10, Newark, England, won the half-mile swimming championship of Britain in 11 minutes 22-5 seconds. These figures eclipse all former records, and incidentally the world's best mark of 11 minutes and 28 seconds made by Dr. Bert B. B. Kieran of Australia last year.

BIG CROWD OF FANS EXPECTED TONIGHT WHEN HEAVYWEIGHTS BATTLE AT CHELSEA

It's a rare thing for the Hub fans to be able to witness a heavyweight gladiatorial battle in the ring, and the chance will not be missed by many of the fans to be present at the meeting of Al Kaufman of California and Fred Bradley of Roxbury at the Lincoln A. C. to-night when they box 20 ten rounds for the decision.

More than ordinary interest exists on the result, as the winner will be touted as the coming champion in his class and the followers on the coast are satisfied that Kaufman is the one who will succeed Jeffries and as in the past the title will remain safely in the West.

It will be Bradley's effort to dispel this belief and the Hub boy has everything to gain by a victory over the brawny Californian.

Both fighters are the most promising of the latest crop developed anywhere in the country and the winner is likely to become famous the world over before his ring career is ended.

Both are graduates of the amateur ranks, Bradley being about the best article seen since the days of Billy Rodenbach of New York, who would have become a champion had he not suffered a permanent injury.

The Roxbury strong boy shapes up very much like the redoubtable New Yorker and is bound to make an impression in the ring before he quits it.

He has not got the formidable appearance of Kaufman, who is a Jeffries in bulk, yet the latter does not underestimate his fighting opponent, which is well, as he would probably get the biggest surprise in his limited experience in the ring. His high regard for Bradley is seen in his careful preparation of two weeks at Highland Lake under two such clever handlers as Bob Deasly and Harry Foley. They know that the calibre of the Eastern ring men requires the best attention paid to preparation and have followed out their plan of putting Kaufman in the finest shape.

As both principals have the dream punch it will be a surprise if the bout goes the full limit, as they will not hesitate in cutting out the pace from the start, being ambitious to strike early and often.

Kaufman will be the favorite, which is natural because of his more widely known prominence and his extra weight and height, but there is no denying the fact that Bradley has a chance and he can be depended upon to give a good account of himself, as he has yet to meet defeat, and once he lands a telling punch is quick to follow it up and can take more damage than mediately.

Kaufman will not be able to hit harder than Bradley, who has had the same training in the Brackenridge shop and it will be a question who can get the punch over first. Bradley has a wonderful defense and has developed speed, the one element which he lacked and which he will need against Kaufman, who has been put through fast work in expectation of a hot pace.

The best advisers in the business will be behind the two men and ring history will count if the bout continues any distance.

The result of the Safir ability of the pair was never so uncertain in any bout, as there is but small dope to figure on which will make it an interesting affair on account of the importance attached to the winner.

The show to-night will start promptly at 8 p. m., the opening bout being of six rounds duration between Kenny Ryan of Cambridge and Billy Clinton of Lowell. The second bout, also of six rounds, will have as contestants Frank Adams of New York and Jimmy Hanlon of Chelsea.

Membership applications for the Lincoln Club can be secured of Mish Murray, No. 1,150 Washington street or William A. Pierce, No. 28 School street. Room 27.

ENTRIES FOR READVILLE TO CLOSE TO-DAY

VANDERBILT CUP CARS GETTING IN FINE SHAPE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Augustus A. Post of the touring committee of the A. A. A., whose performance on the recent tour was of the highest possible order, has been spending a few days in this city. Yesterday he and Royal R. Sheldon were the guests of Vice-President Harlan W. Wilpide at the Bay State Automobile Association. Mr. Post said that several important things had been learned during the recent tour. He was well satisfied that it had been a success and of value to the industry. Speaking about future contests, Mr. Post favored the idea of having a central point from which to send out competing cars on succeeding days, such as was suggested in the SUNDAY AMERICAN. Mr. Post left for home this morning, he driving his White car from Boston to New York. This is the same car that he used in the tour.

Entries for the first week of racing in the Grand Circuit meeting at Readville August 20 to 30 close to-day with the secretary C. M. Jewett. Records made yesterday and to-day no bar.

At Cleveland, Buffalo and Poughkeepsie the list of entries to the numerous open classes were exceptionally heavy, and it is to be hoped the same will prove true at Readville. In this way can the horsemen show how much they appreciate the liberality of the management in standing in the breach when it seemed the backbone of the Grand Circuit was surely to be broken.

The open classes, which close to-day, are as follows: Trotting, free-for-all, 2:12, 2:16 and 2:18; pacing, 2:02, 2:10 and 2:13.

The Vanderbilt cup cars entered by the Frayer Miller people are in excellent shape. One of them has now run over 1,200 miles and has not shown the slightest defect. It has already developed terrific speed, and so far as its cooling is concerned its engineer, Lee Frayer, makes the statement that it keeps cooler than any water cooled car he has ever driven. In a recent run of 100 miles the engine was stopped four times to allow fright ened horses to pass, and each time the engine was restarted on the compression. For an engine of the immense proportion of the Frayer Miller racer this is considered a great feat.

In the course of an article on the Grand Prix, the recent French auto race, A. G. Batchelder said:

"The policing of the circuit could hardly have been improved upon—over 7,000 miles and miles of fences; every crossroad and village was guarded by a gendarme and a soldier; in the villages people used bridges over the streets, and the A. C. F. paid the government for the use of its soldiers.

"The automobile industry of France owes much to the support given by the government in many directions, and the French people have taken a pardonable pride in the successful advancement of their country which has been substantial from the outset.

"Why can't the United States government lend for a couple of days enough soldiers to guard a whole circuit for the Vanderbilt Cup race? The race is a great spectacular event, the greatest of the age, and the general public wants to see it. Furthermore, the industrial condition of the struggle should appeal to Roosevelt, the man who frequently establishes a precedent."

The Pierce six-cylinder which performed such heroic work during the recent blind dash tour, rescuing the Morrisons from their several plights and one being used as an advance and rear guard is attracting considerable attention at Brighton these days. Mr. J. W. Maguire is displaying its fine points to the crowds.

Harry Fosdick of the Harry Fosdick Company is spending a week or two at his camp at Belgrade Lakes. He is having long drawn-out sessions with the nimy tribe and for the time being has forgotten the advantages of gasoline over electrics, foreign over domestic cars. Frank Bourne of the Motor World is enjoying the hospitalities of the camp.

To those who travelled over the entire route the bidding tour, experienced all the short comings as well as the joys of the hated on route, the treatment accorded them by Anderson & Price at Revere Woods was delightful indeed. Here within sight of the great Mount Washington the men forgot all about the poor base accommodations and thanked their lucky stars that there are two such men in the automobile business as Anderson and Price. The cry throughout the trip was "Wait for Brereton Woods" and the realization was equal to the expectations.

HARVARD CREW ON ENGLISH THAMES

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The Harvard crew that is to meet Cambridge's eight on the Thames on September 8 had its first real spin yesterday afternoon. The Harvard men were afloat at 6 o'clock, Flint rowing No. 3 for Morgan. Only paddling was attempted. The form was good. All the men are well.

It is stated that only six of the crew that beat Oxford will be available for the race with Harvard. Doubts are expressed at Cambridge as to whether the Britishers can get into condition in time. The Harvard boat crew passed Sunday at the Star Inn Hotel, and left in the evening for Bourne End, where they will occupy the Riverside cottages.

English rowing men who have seen the Harvard crew are favorably impressed. They notice particularly that they have a longer stroke and more leg drive than the other crews from American universities who have been seen here. Their form, altogether, closely approaches the English style. Cambridge adheres to fixed rowlocks. The Cambridge boat is six feet longer than Harvard's.

The Harvard crew has not yet accepted the challenge from the Bann (Ireland) Rowing Club to race on the River Bann. The captain of the crew says the challenge came rather as a surprise, but it will be given every consideration.

TUG-OF-WAR RIVALS FOR ST. ANNE'S DAY

Great rivalry is being manifested in the open tug-of-war contest to be pulled off at St. Anne's field day and reunion at Columbian Park next Saturday. Charlestown Black has his men out every night practising, and is going to make a strong bid for first money. The two teams from Charlestown Division No. 4, A. O. of H., and Division No. 27, A. of H., the Market Teamsters of Boston and the Granite Cutters of Quincy are getting in the best of shape, and when these teams get on the cleats grand contests are expected. Charles Mooney will referee.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Charlestown—If B claims out before the count and has the necessary points he wins. Arthur F.—Hackett was the catcher.

MILLIONAIRES TRAIN YANGER

CEDAR LAKE, Ind., Aug. 7.—It seldom falls to the lot of a pugilist to have in his training camp two reputed millionaires. Such is the case in the quarters of Benny Yanger, who now is here preparing for his bout on August 10 with Kid Herman. Jerry Ellis, the millionaire automobile enthusiast, and Charles Gray, a Chicago boodleman man, work along with Benny as though they were training for an early bout.

Not only do Ellis and Gray visit the camp and accompany the little Chicago champion on the road work, but in the afternoon each lesson in "manly art" is given the lads and for a copper each boxes two or three rounds with Yanger and Dave Barry.

Benny Yanger continues to have the time of his life, and while putting in strenuous hours at work there is a constant touch of humor to make him forget the hard toil.

MURPHY RALLIES AND BEATS SPIKE ROBSON

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 7.—Tommy Murphy, by a great rally in the fourth and last rounds, had the better of Spike Robson in a rattling six-round go before the National Athletic Club last night. Robson's cleverness and fast footwork, which worked such havoc with Tommy's face in the previous bout, while keeping the Harlem lad guessing for a while to night, did not have the lasting effect, and Tommy, by really championship boxing at the end of the bout turned the verdict.

The Englishman, with his characteristic coolness, left jab and quick footwork, had the crowd with him in the first and second rounds by the ease and cleverness with which he evaded and hit Murphy. The New Yorker tried all sorts of tricks, rushing, clinching and roughness, to stop the Briton's tantalizing methods, but Spike was not to be denied, and for the first six minutes he made it as warm as the weather for Murphy.

Robson's remarkable coolness and boxing baffled the Mig crowd completely, to the outcome. Murphy was trying all the time to get in a punch which would have its lasting effects on his opponent, but during those six minutes Spike was moving at a clip which had Tommy badly rattled.

It looked to be all in the English man's favor when the second round ended, as it appeared as if Murphy was powerless before the shifty Englishman. The third round was like a duplication of the first two, Robson dancing around the ring, escaping Murphy's vicious swings and countering with his short, sharp left to the face.

It went this way until near the end of the round, when Murphy, with a vicious rush and furious attack directly at the Englishman caused Spike to drop all the aggressiveness and do his best to escape the terrific onslaughts of the Harlem boxer. Murphy, in a second, turned the vast crowd in an uproar, and as he kept rushing and fighting Spike to a standstill the cheers and applause were deafening. This rally seemed to take the slush out of Robson. Robson was badly bruised around the eyes, nose and mouth; but Murphy also showed signs effects of the eighteen minutes of work.

Pickering Responsible for Term "Texas Leaguer"

Many fans are unaware that the expression "Texas leaguer," originated in Houston, Texas, and that Ollie Pickering, the crack centre fielder of the Columbus champions, was responsible for the term.

It was during the regime of John J. McCloskey, now manager of the Cardinals, but at that time a Texas League leader, that Pick dropped into Houston one day, on a freight train unkempt and looking as little like a ball player as possible. He had full confidence in his ability, however, and lost no time in applying to Manager McCloskey for a job on his team.

Mac was shy an outfielder. He was keen enough to see through Pickering's unpromising appearance and to make the proper plans and movements of an athlete. Pick bought him a shave and a haircut, fixed him up with a uniform and told him to report at the ball park in time for the game that afternoon. Pick did so, and achieved a remarkable record. In one game he got seven hits, every one seven times out of seven times at bat, every one of which was a short, looping fly over first or third base, that fell safe just too far out for the basemen to reach and just too far in for the gardeners. That sort of a hit had tantalized fielders before, but it had never been labelled.

The report of Pickering's remarkable afternoon on the inside sprung at once and as the performance had been made in the Texas League the idea got that they were christened "Texas leaguers," a name they bear to the present time.

At the South End grounds this afternoon, the fast moving Pirates will tackle the Beanesters for the fourth time. The visitors have won two out of three games played, and expect also to land this afternoon's prize package.

The Pirates have their eye on first place these days, and the team that stops them in their mad flight toward the pennant goal has to go some. The Bostons took the opening game last Saturday by superior playing, but yesterday the Smokeiown team made the home aggregation look like a lot of sailing platers, and the Bostons had the flag of truce up long before the final count in either game.

Pirates Have Blood in Their Eyes.

The Pirates have blood in their eyes again to-day, and they are determined to make the locals fight to the last ditch. If they hope to be conquerors. Hans Wagner is sailing to-day, when he thinks of the ugliness waits he gave the leather by yesterday's contests, and he says he is going to be there with the wallop again this afternoon.

Mike Lynch, the former Brown pitcher, will probably do the twirling for the Pirates this afternoon. Mike is in great form, and should be able to give the locals all the trouble they can handle.

It's a gamble as to the pitcher Tenney will use. Big Pfeffer is not feeling very well, and Witherup may be pressed into service. If these two pitchers fail to respond at the call of play, "Little Cy" Young may do the honors again.

The Bostons did not play ball as well in the field yesterday as they did but week and consequently they dropped both games. The first game went to the visitors to the tune of 3 to 0, while the second game, which was a regular farce comedy, also resulted in favor of the visitors by a score of 7 to 3.

Liefield Was On Rubber.

"Lefty" Liefield was on the rubber for the Pirates, while Dorner was on the letter for the home team. The first game was nip and tuck all the way to the ninth inning, when the fans beat all in favor of a Boston victory.

In the sixth inning the Bostons came near getting two runs and tieing the score. With two men on base and two down, Howard hit a ball just back of the second base. Beaumont came in for it on the run, and scooped it in, holding on to the two Bub tallies. It looked to many of the fans as if Beaumont had had the ball on the pick-up, but the umpire did not see it that way.

The playing of both teams in the first game was very good. Clarke and Beaumont did great work to help Liefield for the visitors, while Rasa Wagner was a terror to the fistield.

Tenney and Bridwell Shone.

For the Bostons in the first game Tenney and Bridwell did nice work in the infield, while "Cozy" Dolan did some phenomenal stunts in the outfield.

The second game was a cinch for the visitors. Errors of all kinds were made by the home team. Brain threw the ball into the bleachers on one occasion, and Dolaman also made some Sam Wise throwns. The Bostons were as strong, if not stronger, at the bat than the visitors in the second contest, but their errors spelled whatever chance they had of making the game close nor exciting.

The bright spot in the playing of the home team in the second battle was the home-run hit of Brain in the sixth. The entire Pittsburg team played with snap in the second game, and gave Sam Leever exceptionally fine support.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Mike Lynch, the former Brown pitcher, will probably do the twirling for the visitors this afternoon.

* * *

The series now stands two to one in favor of the Pirates.

* * *

When the rain started to fall after the first inning of the second game, the fans left the grandstand, but bleachers swarmed into the grandstand.

* * *

Lou Criger was again an interested spectator at the game. The Boston American back stop is improving in looks with each succeeding day.

* * *

Boston would have tied the score in the sixth inning of the first game had it not been for Beaumont's wonderful scoop in of Howard's field.

* * *

"Lefty" Liefield demonstrated in the seventh inning of the first contest that he was game to the core. He was hit below the belt by a swift grounder off Dolan's bat, yet right on he toiled true to form, he was obliged to lay outstretched on the diamond, so serious was the blow he received from the batter.

* * *

Brain's home run in the sixth inning of the second game over the left-field fence was the feature of the day on the Boston side.

* * *

Manager Clark had intended to pitch Liefield in both games, but the heat was too intense, he put "Schoolmaster" Lever on the rubber in the second game.

* * *

Lindaman got three bases on his hit to center in the seventh of the second game, as the ball took a sudden bound over Lindaman's head.

THREE HORSES THROWN WHILE ONE RUNS AWAY

GIRL UMPIRE BREAKING HEARTS

YANKTON, S. D., Aug. 7.—If you are an attractive young woman with ambitions toward a nice little home somewhere, but haven't had an opportunity to preside at the head for that long, flowing, baseball umpire.

This advice is based on the experience of Miss Amanda Clement, the clever and attractive empire of the Yankton team, since she became a regular umpire she has received more than sixty offers of marriage from the players in the league in which she wields the indicator.

Miss Clement, who is an exceedingly pretty girl, was hired as umpire in an effort to put a stop to rowdyism on the diamond. The players soon discovered that she was in earnest and a good umpire as well. Lastly, with one accord, they fell in love with her.

"I'm wedded to baseball," she told one whose ambition to win her hand is even greater than his desire for major league honors, "and there's nothing doing. I've had over sixty proposals from members of our league clubs, but I believe I can do more for the game and the nation by uplifting the characters of professional ball players who don't know how to behave.

BLACKINGTON AUTO WON.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 7.—The carnival week programme in this city opened yesterday afternoon, the first feature being automobile races held at Bachelors Beach. His time was 1.10 4-5 for the mile.

A Daniel Come to Judgment in the O'Day Case

By William F. Kirk.

(President Harry Pulliam of the National League fined Umpire Hank O'Day $50 for refusing McGinnity and Peitz to exchange blows on the field, and followed up this weird finding by suspending O'Day when the latter tendered his resignation.)

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

An Umpire ..... Henry O'Day.
The Judge ..... Henry Pulliam.
The Prisoner ..... Henry Peitz.

SCENE: A beautifully furnished room in Manhattan. The Judge, attired in ermine, sitting on the bench. The Umpire and the Prisoner standing before him.

THE JUDGE—The quality of mercy is not strained.
It falleth as the gentle Texas Leaguer;
'Tis mightiest in the mighty, strong and such great, good fellows as one you see
Before you now. Umpire O'Day, stand forth!
O'DAY—Mercy, good lord!
PEITZ—Mercy, good scout!
THE JUDGE—Peace, brawlers! As ye stand before me now,
And as I think of how ye broke the law—
My how ye made a holy show of baseball—
Out of the Pittsburg ball park, such blind rage
Goes sizzling through my soul that I could scream!
Where is McGinnity? I do not see him.
O'DAY—No doubt upon the bench he sits, but while we wait
Allow me to present my mournful story.
McGinnity and Peitz may have offended—
They may have made the park a slaughterhouse,
But, Judge, so suddenly they came together
And so ferocious were the blows exchanged
That I could not restrain them till too late.
I am an umpire, not a referee—
I did not sign to make men break from clinches.
THE JUDGE—Thou cur! Thou weak-kneed critter. Just for this
I shall impose a fifty-dollar fine.
What are an umpire's eyes but things to blacken?
What is an umpire's nose, to be protected?
O'DAY—If you impose a fifty-dollar fine
I tell you here and now that I resign!
THE JUDGE—What! • You resign! Well, then, you are suspended!
Come, Peitz, old friend. The session now is ended.
(Exit Peitz and Judge, arm in arm.)
O'DAY—Farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness!
May brother umpires learn from my sad case
Never to dodge a wallop in the face.
(CURTAIN.)

An All-American Team of CRACK BOWLERS TOUR

CINCINNATI, Aug. 7. The tour of the All American bowling trio throughout this country three weeks will start in Cincinnati during the 1906 season. The trio will be in charge of Samuel Kaipf, secretary of the American Bowling Congress. All of the eighty-one series of games played were won and an all around phenomenal record was made. The first trip was confined to the States, but the second will be more extensive by a visit to Canada, Mexico and Cuba. A number of applications for dates have been received by Manager Kaipf at Dayton, O., and the demand is expected to be greater than the trio will be able to fulfil. From what point the Bowling Tourists will start has not yet been determined, as all the dates are not engaged.

The team will begin practice in New York city October 1. The tour as mapped out at present, will start South along the Atlantic coast as far as Florida, thence to Cuba. Returning to New Orleans, and after a few contests in the Southwest, they will proceed to Mexico City. From here they will go to the Pacific coast, the Northwest and Middle West, and by easy stages proceed to Canada. The best tenpin material of the East and West will make up the team. With them will be several pin kingpins that visited the Queen City last Winter for matches with the A. C. T.

Among the aspirants are: Dresscher of Memphis, O. Jimmy Smith of Brooklyn, John J. Vaughen of New York; W. Wood of Newark, N. J.; Henry Coon, Brooklyn; Charles J. Monnain, Chicago; Dave Weber, Milwaukee. In each city the three most representative contests will be played. Total pins are to count. Three diamond studded medals will be offered to the team that footsthe trio. Two men and individual extra Albion games will also be played.

HANLON SAYS INDIAN JUDE IS A REAL COMER

"After this solo around the National League circuit the followers of the Reds will see Frank Jude at his best," declared Manager Hanlon, discussing his Indian right fielder. "The boy is had a sprained ankle at present and is not showing his true worth. But I can see where he is going to be a star, and it will not require more time than the present trip to make him entirely easy in the company he is travelling in at present. His speed and good judgment on the bases is something that will be immediately, as we have not been overburdened with intelligent base running this season. Jude is smart and is looking for information all the time on the subject of the game, and when he has had a little more time trying to improve his individual work, I don't think that Jude ever will be a scrappy player in the sense that Mertaw, Keeler and others are scrappy when it comes to hustling and setting a good example to the other players by

Notes of the Harness Horses

By J. A. Q.

It is authority for the statement that he has never seen so fast a 2.30 five-heater as a couple of pacers. He is after the stallion and Phoenix (2.12¼), with Johnny Dewey.

* * *

In one day at Free Horte records two fast ones and three more stood by Margaret (2.04¼), record now 2.04¾, and Miss Jones (2.11¾), are a couple more at the same place to Margaret Dillon, driving the latter. They are all in the Fleming stable.

* * *

Len McDonald has a two-year-old colt in his string that is a trotter, and he is training him and whipping him around a mile in 2.27 half in 1.07, and the last quarter in 33½ seconds. Hickory Pole (2.14½), said will soon be located at the Johnson farm in Milton.

* * *

Has English has secured the betting privileges in the Connecticut circuit, now in full operation, and he has been doing well for him around Bridgeport this week and we are told it is good enough to set a man up in business. "Come on, lets, they will be off in a minute."

* * *

T. W. Lewis has been hustling out through the West and has secured a number of horses for Bowdoin's Driving Park at Rockville, Sept. 1 to 7 inclusive. He reports the quality of the entries of amateur drivers being the best ever held in that city. Entries are expected from all of the cities in the Rogue neighborhood.

* * *

Next Tuesday will be the first day of the Grand Circuit meeting at Cleveland, O., and the following week will be at Columbus. Buckeye Belle (2.04¼), the best mare in the world, will be at Columbus, and Walter Cox will be in charge of Dan Patch (1.55), the champion pacer, and Minor Heir (2.03¼), the champion trotting stallion, will be in charge of Ed. Geers. Dan Patch will start in the free for all pace, and Minor Heir will start in the 2.08 trot. Both horses will be in the 2.04 class. Dan Patch will also start in the 2.04 pace.

* * *

Randolph K. Clarke, one of the leading members of the Rochester Driving Club, has sold his handsome pacing mare, R. C. (2.07¼), to Harold Pardy of Haverhill, who will use her in the Grand Circuit.

* * *

William Metcalf of Beath, P. Q., has bought the stallion Alcyl Wilkes (2.11) of Donald Smith, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, and will use him in the Grand Circuit.

* * *

Reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Tweezer has not been "entirely disappointed," and the great trotter could not start at Cleveland.

Trainer Jack Kinney does not think much of the index policy the same and says all sizes that he has seen so far, but 2.30, five heaters, is a notch better than to have the pacers step at against the pick on many occasions. Kinney says that he ought to be able to finish the colors to declare off the purses after the race, and that is the only thing wrong. It is too bad a thing to be always an honest one.

* * *

Jude (2.08¾), that has been racing so fauors in the Grand Circuit, was sold up to William Smith "Good-will Bill," at an auction for $225, and that was he was taken delivered him. Time after time that son for him. It is said that he can step a mile in 2.08 or better, and a 1.34 gait.

* * *

The two Long Johns races in the stable of Howard Hedding, but have been driven by Lester Hedding. Hedding recently had a fall while behind Arbor in a race at Utica, N. Y., a month ago.

* * *

A curb is not considered a square matter in most harness races, but Hedding has gotten obnoxious in the country, now Manzanita the fastest pacer in the world at 2.01¼, has a curb, and one had been bothered with a curb for some time, but is now working for the first time.

Girls, Don't Marry Unless You Are in Love, But Do Not Shut Up Your Heart Against Love

By Beatrice Fairfax

ONCE upon a time there was a woman who thought she could live without love.

Many times and oft love came knocking at the door of her heart, but always she said, "Go away, love, you are a troublesome little god, and I have no room for you in my busy, well-ordered life."

So, after a time, love folded his wings and sadly flew away.

But before he went he said, "Foolish woman, to imagine you can live without the best thing in the world. The day will come when you would give all that you possess for one little bit of the love you threw away."

The woman, however, laughed and went her way.

Life's Great Lesson

"I HAVE my career," she said. "My life is full of interests—why should I settle down to a humdrum existence, with nothing but love to fill my life, when I can have so many other and more varied things?"

Time went on, and she thought she was happy.

But the day came when her career did not satisfy her.

She saw other women happy in the love of their husbands and children.

The longing for the touch of little, clinging, childish fingers grew almost unendurable.

So she called Love to come to her.

But this time Love laughed at her. "Oh, no," he said, "I cannot come; it is too late. I sought you when you had youth and health and beauty, but now what have you to offer?"

And so the woman learned life's great lesson face to face, and knew that all the careers on earth cannot take the place of love.

There are hundreds of young women who are doing much the same thing as this woman did.

They are dilly-dallying with some man's honest love, putting off from day to day and month to month, with the idea that they are not ready to marry; that they must do something with their lives before they settle down.

What Might Have Been

IT'S foolishness, pure and simple, girls.

Men don't want faded, blase women for wives; they want blooming, fresh, young girls, who can share their youth and ambitions and interests.

Don't marry unless you love, but don't shut your heart to love.

Of all careers open to woman the most natural and fitting is that of wife and motherhood. It is the career she was created for, and the noblest one she can aspire to.

Remember that, you cannot put Love off too long. He is a capricious little god and requires much incense burnt at his altar. He will not come for the mere asking.

A man may love you for distraction, but human love has its limits of endurance, and if you trifle with it too long it will wear out.

Once a man's love has grown cold it is absolutely impossible to rekindle it.

Lead your lives as busily and happily as you can.

Go ahead with your careers, but do not close your eyes to that other career which every woman has a chance at.

Do not spend the better part of your life in loneliness and longing for what might have been.

Makes Old Ribbon as Fresh as New

NEARLY every woman knows what it is to have tucked away in some corner bits of ribbon which have become slightly discolored through use, yet which she dislikes to throw away.

If she only knew how she might easily sponge or wash and iron them back into very nearly their original attractiveness.

Ribbon in delicate shades which has lost its color and somewhat soiled may be washed in naphtha, a process which will effectually prevent it from fading when the dyes of the sun become a little stronger and the bright light makes shoddiness so much more apparent.

The soiled piece should be placed in the naphtha and thoroughly saturated with it, every fold and wrinkle in turn being well rubbed with the hands.

When the spirit has absorbed much of the dirt, empty it into a clean bottle and continue the process with some fresh naphtha. If all the spirit is bottled, well corked and set aside for a day or two, the grains of dirt will settle, and the little of the bottom of the bottle, leaving the liquid above clear and clean.

When poured off into a fresh receptacle it can be used again and again. After this treatment the ribbon should be pressed with a hot iron on the right side over a piece of brown paper.

Another method of treating ribbon which has been washed is to "squeeze" it on a polished surface. A marble slab is flat on a clean candle-shelf, the chimney piece or the top of a well-hand will answer the purpose; the ribbon, being pressed down smoothly with the sides of the hands until it adheres to the surface of the marble.

Leave it to dry, and when it is pulled off will be found to have a lustre which cannot be attained by ironing.

LETTERS FROM GIRLS WHO TELL HOW TO KEEP HOUSE

HERE are some more letters from bright girls who are trying to win the doll's house. Some of these letters will be printed every day, so watch for yours. It may be published any day.

Write the very best letter you can on how you would keep house. Take plenty of time about it and see if you can write a better letter than the best of these.

SAVE THE PENNIES

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

A good housekeeper does her work well and regular. Monday is wash day, Tuesday is ironing day, Wednesday sweeping some of the rooms and dusting them and doing the mending; Thursday, sewing and visiting; Friday, scrubbing and sweeping, and washing windows; Saturday is baking and cleaning bath. Besides this there are beds to be made, stoves to be kicked down, sewing to be done. Children should be loved and cared for, taught to respect older people, to help their parents, and save their pennies. They must be taught right and wrong, taught to obey and to love God and all people.

RUTH FIELDING, 7 years.
No. 5 Kinnaird street, Cambridge.

A PERFECT SYSTEM

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

If I were a mother I would have a perfect system for keeping house. I would see that my children were properly bathed each morning, and should have regular hours for eating and sleeping. I would also keep them in the fresh air as much as possible and I would do all I could for my children's comfort and happiness that was possible.

MILDRED A. PERRY, 13 years.
No. 58 Forrest street, Roxbury.

NO HOUSEKEEPING

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

I am a young man, twenty-one years of age, and am deeply in love with a girl four years my junior, who loves me. But she has an older sister, who loves me also, and thinks that I am in love with her, as she does not know that I am keeping company. Whenever I meet her sister she always stops to talk to me, and I do not like her, and do not know what I should do about it. I do not want to tell her sister that I love my younger sister better and will marry her within another year. But the older sister has no lover yet, and she wants to marry first, as she is older than I. Please tell me what I should do, as I do not want to hurt her feelings, and I do not know whether I should tell her older sister about my love toward her younger sister?

J. Z. P. A.

I THINK you had better tell the older sister about your engagement. It is too late to let her go on caring for you when you have no love for her. The older sister cannot always stay out. You will avoid trouble if you announce your engagement.

DOES IT PAY TO BE BEAUTIFUL?

IS a business girl by virtue of her good looks alone preferred to a plain girl? Except in very rare cases, where handsome features and a fine figure are the chief qualifications for a post, beauty does not increase the salary by a shilling.

Take the stage, for instance. There, at least, beauty commands admirers, and so adds to the market value of the actress. Yet, but how many of our first-rank actresses are beautiful? Very few.

Smartness, alertness, and a pleasing manner are of more importance behind the counter than handsome features.

Still less is beauty reckoned an asset in the business office. The average man does not encourage the presence of pretty clerks in his office. He fears that they may distract the attention of the men, and so lead to a waste of valuable time. Will you come and help me spend it?"

Miss Langford looked at her friend.

"I don't think we are engaged to-night," she murmured. "Ask me, Reseltz?"

Reseltz thought not; in fact, was sure not.

"That's good! Then you'll come?" cried Grieve eagerly.

CHAPTER LXXXV.
"The Shadow of Something"

H, I'll let you off, Haggard—I'll escort the ladies alone!" cried Grieve, heedlessly. Rushed in by the champagne to which he was unaccustomed, and losing his head completely under the spell of Miss Langford's smiles.

She was a type of a woman with which he had never before been brought into contact, an uncommonly pretty woman, her graceful, charming appearance set off to its full advantage by the frock she wore, a fetching affair of muslin and chiffon and fancy ribbons that set off to good advantage her small foot, shod in a smart shoe.

There was a touch of silk when she moved that made its sheer appeal to Grieve's senses as has the faint, elusive perfume that clings about her hair. Compliments were languorous and full of grace; if the slightest suspicion of art had been called in to aid nature it was merely suggested, and with subtlety and discretion; her color was low, beautiful's modulated, almost caressing, for Miss Langford was a consummate artiste off the stage.

Grieve, already smarting, he was intoxicated by her gracefulness of manner, his vanity was flattered.

Often in the last days he had watched such women entering theatres and fashionable restaurants, driving past in carriages, feeling far remote from their world.

Suddenly he had been transported into the sphere in which they moved; it would soon be no novelty to him, he reflected, to sit by their side in carriage or theatre, he who a few weeks ago had been "walking out" with his landlady's daughter in her cheap finery.

A Contretemps

How impossible Violet would have been in the world wherein these radiant women moved! How fortunate that he had managed to get out of the entanglement! He laughed loudly and rather foolishly, flattered by the readiness with which Miss Langford and her friend had accepted his invitation. He only wished that he had got on those brand-new evening clothes, and that Stattleworth and the other clerks at the office could have seen him now!

"I hate to spoil your party—"

In the midst of the laugh Grieve heard Haggard's voice speaking, clearly and very decidedly, and he felt as though he were on the clouds to earth again.

"I hate to spoil your fun, but it will have to be some other evening, Camille."

That Haggard knew her well enough to call her by her Christian name Grieve was conscious of an absurd spasm of jealousy. "Mr. Grieve is not free this evening, and I am sorry to say that I am not free, for important reasons, really, why I cannot let him off—"

"How horrible and disagreeable you are, Paul!" pouted Miss Langford, two deep rose dimples coming into her cheeks—at which no one was better aware than Miss Langford herself. "I had quite set my heart on going to a theatre to-night, and it is so dull for two women to go alone—"

"Oh, but I am going to take you, Miss Langford," protested Grieve. "I am not going to let Mr. Haggard interfere with my pleasure—or yours, which is much more important," he added, thinking the compliment rather neat.

And he looked defiantly across at Haggard.

"Look here, ladies, you must let me settle the bill—where's your waiter?" He pulled out a handful of money rather ostentatiously, feeling how easily he was dropping into the new role of man about town—until he met the steady gaze of Haggard's eyes; then instantly he reddened uncomfortably, regretting if in any way he had put his foot into it.

Had he made some error of good form in offering to pay for the ladies' dinner? or was it simply that Haggard was jealous, because he was making such tremendous running? He supposed he just have one more drink with them and then we'll go and get a hox somewhere."

TELL HORRORS OF SCENES ON SINKING SHIP

Survivors of Sirio Add to Evidence of Brutality by Male Passengers.

CARTAGENA, Spain, Aug. 7.—New tales of horror are being told with each hour, as survivors of the ill-fated Ocean steamer Sirio are brought to shore, and new and ghastly evidence of the terrible loss of life. Many bodies are being thrown by the waves, and with each tide and fishing smacks which are arriving in rapid succession bring perishings whom they found floating at sea, a long distance from the scene of the disaster.

Ten of the rescued passengers have died since they were brought here and a child has been born to another. Stories of brutality on the part of the male passengers are reiterated and corroborated on every hand. Women and children were trampled under foot in the mad rush for the small boats, the men even using knives upon helpless women.

Forcibly Removed Life Belt.

The Bishop of San Paulo, Brazil, was forcibly robbed of a life belt which he had placed about his waist by an Argentinian who furnished a knife at the time. The Bishop was left helpless in the waves and drowned.

News of the safety of Captain Paradi of the Sirio has been received. He declared that he would go down with his ship, but was forcibly taken off against his will.

Survivors of the wreck are quartered in theatres, hospitals and clubs. They state that the steamer sank with extreme rapidity and many persons were on deck as she disappeared.

Remarkable Heroism Shown.

Sad tales of the sundering of members of the same family are being told with remarkable reports of heroism. One Italian woman kept her three children afloat on a plank until they were picked up. A bridegroom, who was on his honeymoon, lost his bride and sister, and one old man who was saved lost three children. Carlos Cruchaga, a resident of Valparaiso, Chile, was a passenger with his family on the Sirio, saved his three sons and also other passengers. Senor returned to Valparaiso who is eighteen years old and an expert swimmer, saved two children whose parents are unknown. One family, consisting of father, mother and six children, was drowned with the exception of the father, who lost his reason.

NEWS OF LABOR.

Practically all the shops in this city have granted the demand of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union for a minimum wage of $3.60 a day, with the exception of the Metal Ceiling Association, which has thirty men on strike. Fifteen of these strikers leave for New York to-day to work for $4.50 for an eight-hour day.

P. J. Downey, of New York, international organizer, addressed last night's meeting, and will remain here until the trouble with the Metal Ceiling Association is settled. He stated that full financial support will be given the men on strike.

There will be a report submitted meeting next Monday night to ratify the adoption of the new wage scale and celebrate the union's victory.

BIGGEST PARADE EVER.

From present indications this year's Labor Day parade will be the largest in the history of this city. More than fifty organizations have thus far voted to parade. The parade will march in three divisions, Central Labor Union, Building Trades Section and the Central Labor Union and District Assembly 30, Knights of Labor, original.

Brewery Workers' Union No. 20 has voted that every member must parade or pay a fine of $10. Many of the floats, bunpers and white belts, the 6,000 members of Union Brewery at Roger Park, the largest labor organization in the State, will march in the Central Labor Union Division. The committees of arrangements include: Chairman, Thomas D. J. Tobin, Frank X. Brown, T. J. McCarthy, J. Landers, William Brewer, J. J. Keough, J. J. Shea, J. J. Hunt, W. H. Kelly, Edward Johnson, William Hurley, William E. Gaylord, J. N. Gillespie, J. A. Murray, F. T. Burns, Campaign, P. J. Murray, F. T. Burns, P. J. Tobin, J. O'Brien and John Dolan, of Roger Park Brewery. Two bands will escort the team drivers.

RECEPTION TO FOSTER.

Plans are being made to give Frank K. Foster, the well-known labor representative, a rousing send-off on the occasion of his departure for England as one of the jour as fraternal delegate to the British Trades Union Congress.

A testimonial banquet will be tendered him by local labor leaders on the eve of his departure at the Quincy House, Martin J. Lacey, president of the Central Labor Union, will be toastmaster. Among those present will be James Wilson, of New York, president, and the Patterson Makers' League of North America, who is the other fraternal delegate to England.

A tug which will have on board a number of relatives and friends of Mr. Foster will be wishing him bon voyage all the way to Boston Light.

Ambition Falsely Gratified Does Harm

That Is Why We Preach Against Excessive Chess Playing and Similar "Amusements"

In the last column of this page you will read an article by the champion chess player of the world, Mr. Emanuel Lasker.

Mr. Lasker's letter replies to an editorial published some time ago. He was good enough to bring the letter to this office himself. We write here what was said to him in reply to his argument in favor of chess and against the BOSTON AMERICAN'S assertion that the greatest of all games can be extremely harmful.

Mr. Lasker replies to our attack on chess by saying that the making of money is not everything. It is NOT everything. There is infinitely more energy and time wasted in foolish, stupid money-making than at the game of chess.

But even the dullest kind of money-making is often PRODUCTIVE OF SOMETHING.

Wealth is produced or distributed. Employment is created.

But all this is aside of the mark. This is the argument that we offered to Mr. Lasker, and which we now offer to you.

The moving power in humanity is a strange thing that we call AMBITION.

We have in us three fundamental ATTRACTIONS OR PASSIONS —call them what you will.

First is the instinct of SELF-PRESERVATION, which makes us keep alive and stay here on this earth.

The second is the instinct of the family, of paternity, which provides for generations to succeed us, when we go.

Third is AMBITION, WHICH CAUSES PROGRESS.

That strange thing, ambition, exists, big or little, in all of us.

It is ambition that causes the savage girl to stick a piece of bone through the cartilage of her nose. She wants to look handsomer.

And it is ambition that makes the man lose his life trying to manage a flying machine.

Our instinctive love of life keeps us here. Our love of the family provides endless generations. AMBITION HAS LIFTED US FROM THE LOWEST SAVAGERY TO OUR PRESENT PLANE, AND IT WILL LIFT US EVENTUALLY TO REAL CIVILIZATION, TO THE REALIZATION OF OUR HIGH DESTINY ON THIS EARTH.

Ambition is the tool with which divine wisdom forces men onward. It is the eternal, restless element in our being that COMPELS US CONSTANTLY TO FRESH EFFORT.

The greatest things that have been done by man have not helped him, or made him any happier individually, EXCEPT INASMUCH AS THEY HAVE GRATIFIED THE RESTLESS AMBITION THAT WILL BE SATISFIED.

Marvellously does the cosmic mind work in forcing us to use our powers in useful ways.

Ambition is the craving for recognition from our fellow-men. And, almost without exception, the man of ambition IS COMPELLED TO MAKE HIS MARK BY HELPING HIS FELLOWS.

The unknown genius who gave us the mariner's compass, sending it to Europe from the East through the Arabs, satisfied his ambition, BECAUSE HE TAUGHT HIS FELLOW-MEN TO FIND THEIR WAY ON THE DESERT OF WATER.

The genius that gave us the law of gravitation and the differential calculus gratified a pure ambition by adding to human knowledge and giving a new conception of the grandeur of the universe.

We say to Mr. Lasker and to others that too close attention to chess is bad for the individual and for humanity, BECAUSE IT GRATIFIES AMBITION WITHOUT A USEFUL RESULT.

Anything that satisfies man's ambition without forcing him to HELP HIS FELLOW-MEN is a detriment to him and a detriment to the race.

Mr. Lasker is a man of unusual force. The nation is proud to possess his mind, so farseeing and capable.

No one questions his RIGHT to devote himself to the complicated, difficult, abstract chess problems if he chooses. But we question whether a mind as good as his ought not now, even by COMPULSION, to be put at other work.

We can spare him, perhaps, to gratify our national vanity by conquering all other minds in his line of effort.

But who knows what the brain inside that broad forehead might have achieved? Who knows what REAL problems of this earth, what questions important to his fellow-men it might have solved, had Lasker dealt with the surface of the earth, the men and the forces on it, instead of dealing with the surface of the chessboard, with the unreal creatures and the arbitrary moves of that visionary kingdom?

Whatever you do, reader, develop YOUR AMBITION, and see that it works in useful lines.

There is IN YOU only a certain amount of force. The days are drifting rapidly behind you; your chance to do something worth while gets smaller and smaller.

Save your real strength FOR YOUR REAL WORK.

Nurse your ambition and determine in your mind that, big or little, powerful or weak, it shall at least work along the lines INTENDED, and use its powers for the benefit of the other human beings fastened to this little earth with you.

We have before us real problems enough, of life and death, of poverty and politics to solve without putting our minds on the right-angle idiocy of a knight, the diagonal possibilities of a bishop or the irritating uncertainties of a queen on the chessboard. The earth is our chessboard, and to checkmate evil should be our game.

Municipal Light Inquiry Has Its Comical Sides

(From Practical Politics)

THERE is a series of jokes connected with the subject of municipal lighting and its investigation, as conducted under the auspices of the Boston City Council. The first joke was in the appointment of a committee consisting of anti-municipal lighters, in the ratio of seven to one. The latest joke is that which allows the committee until September 22 in which to make its report.

Unless the committee intends to have a real junket at the expense of the lighting companies it could report as well on September 1 as on September 22, for the material of the report can be found in any one of half a dozen addresses by Mr. Burdett, and all that is needed is an introduction making the report look fresh and apropos.

Little Editorials from the People

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHIMES AGAIN.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In your issue of July 31 there appeared a communication signed by Dr. C. D. Gibson Mack, who evidently is misinformed in regard to the ringing of the chimes on the Christian Science Church. He declares that on Sunday morning the chimes "begin at 7 o'clock and continue until 10 a. m.," and that they "ring from 5 to 7 p. m." The following are the facts: The Westminster chimes ring for a few seconds at 7 in the morning, at 12 noon, and at 6 at night. On Sunday the chimes are played between 10:15 and 10:45 p. m., and on Wednesday evening between 7 and 7:30. The bells on the Arlington Street Church ring every fifteen minutes.

World Champion Lasker Defends Game of Chess

Gives Advice on Game That He Understands Better Than Any Other Living Man

By Emanuel Lasker

THE BOSTON AMERICAN, on its editorial page, has given the young people of America the advice of not doing useless things too well. The writer has told them to put their real effort into that which is really worth while. And then he has proceeded to explain his meaning.

The proposition really needs no demonstration. Everybody will agree with it as an axiom. But what is to be called useless and what is really worth while? The explanation of the BOSTON AMERICAN does not enlighten the reader on the question; in fact, it misleads him. And some of the statements made in the article can be shown to be unfounded.

The first paragraph concludes: "But we ask our young readers to remember that in each of us there is only a certain amount of vitality, a certain amount of physical and mental energy."

This is true only in so far as there is a limit to our vitality. Its amount is not fixed, like the capital of a business man, but, rather, like his credit, it is very variable in kind and quantity. And it must be spent each moment, or it impairs the source from which it flows.

The writer proceeds: "Don't put too much of your power, of your vital force into things that are going to be useless to you hereafter."

But which are the things that are going to be useless hereafter? Nobody can be certain of that. Every occupation has a function to fulfil. None, however humble, is quite without utility.

Is Warning Justified?

THE advice of the writer is nevertheless sound. In whichever direction an excess of power is spent there is bound to be detrimental reaction. But the writer does not point out where the boundary line of safety is drawn.

The article continues: "Be warned by those who devote their lives to playing chess." Then again, "Many a foolish man has wasted a lifetime and landed in the insane asylum through it."

I do not think the warning justified and know very few chess players who have gone insane. Within the last hundred years several thousand players of first rank have lived, many to a very old age, and lived happily.

There are only four instances of fine chess players gone insane during this period—Neumann, Morphy, Steinitz, Pillsbury.

Nor did any of these lose his mental balance through playing chess, as I have shown elsewhere. The fact is, and medical men will bear me out, that chess strengthens the brain and makes it better capable to do the work of immediate use to man.

The writer then says: "The great chess player has never achieved greatness in any other direction."

How many great musicians have achieved greatness outside of music? None, except Philidor, who was the leading French composer of his time, but greater as a chess player. Buckle, the great historian, was as a chess player on a par with the English champion, Staunton.

In the article it is then stated: "Wherever you see a concentrated mind bent low over a chess board, forgetting everything else, you see a human being going to waste nine times out of ten. The effort that might be productive is used in a criminally nonproducing way."

Defends Chess Playing

SURELY, production is not confined to increasing the capital of the nation. To create joys, to add to one's capacity for work, to obtain a profound insight into the laws governing fight and competition, is a purpose worthy of effort. The playing of chess is a means to this end. Why, then, call it unproductive? So would all art and much of education be if measured by the same standard.

The writer concludes his article with the admonition: "The animal side of life—the physical side—must not be allowed to dominate and control the real side. Try for the only real championship—that of the mind."

But let not the reader therefore imagine that he can raise his intellectual level by study of mathematics, of physics, of biology, of social life, of any one or several of the sciences, merely. He would as easily overshoot the safe limit in earnest mental work as in play.

Chess in moderation is an excellent brake. It provides a point of rest, and therefore stimulates. It teaches many lessons not to be learned except over the chessboard. For all that, excess in chess, as in anything else, is of harm. A man or woman should have varied interests; but I believe that the ancient game of chess, in the long course of its existence, has proven its right to be one of the legitimate interests of mankind.

A chess player's advice is: Don't do useful things all the time. Spread your interests, nurse them. He is the richest man who is rich in the sentiment that underlies and prompts action, and he the happiest who can appreciate with a sympathetic mind.

Use your vitality in the way in which the proverbial Scotchman spends his money—get adequate value for what you spend. But the value must be paid in the coin of things that make life full and many sided.
